Mothers and children were charmed by the Duchess of Kent when she visited Catterick Garrison. She adopted this thumb-in-mouth posture to comfort one baby she met in the crèche at the Duchess of Kent's Military Hospital, which she was seeing for the first time since opening it 15 years ago

Thumbs up for Catterick

ON a visit to Army and Royal Air Force bases in North Yorkshire, the Duchess of Kent met many of the men and women who have been involved directly or indirectly with service in the Gulf.

At Catterick Garrison she met some of the families of the 500 men and women from the location serving in the Gulf. They gathered at the Duchess of Kent's Military Hospital, which the Duchess was seeing for the first time since opening it 15 years ago.

She also met people who had manned the Army's North East District Helpline which in eight weeks received more than 3,500 calls about Gulf matters.

The Duchess was met at Catterick by Brig Christopher Drewry, Commander of 24 Airmobile Brigade, who presented the hospital's Commanding Officer, Col David Bradford, and Matron, Col Maura Mulhern.

During her tour she was told of the Garrison's contribution to the Gulf effort, which included the deployment of 80 hospital staff and the refresher training of 100 Territorials and Reservists from throughout Britain before they went to the Middle East.

The Garrison also provided 120 medical orderlies from 25 Airmobile Field Ambulance, RAMC, who would have rapidly transported casualties from the front line to the various field hospitals.

More than 100 men were sent from 15 Squadron, Royal Corps of Transport. They moved combat supplies including ammunition, fuel, rations and water to forward units involved in the fighting.

From the 2nd Royal Tank Regiment were sent 65 men of the Armoured Delivery Squadron, who unloaded tanks from ships and onto tank transporters, and 25 members of the regimental band who served as medics, adopting their war role of stretcher-bearers and first-aid attendants.

More than 120 individuals with specialist skills were also sent from the Garrison.

The Duchess earlier visited Claro Barracks, Ripon, home of 38 Engineer Regiment, from where 130 members of 15 Field Support Squadron, Royal Engineers left for the Gulf in December.

At Catterick Garrison she also called at Cambrai Barracks, home of the 2nd Royal Tank Regiment. Another visit in her itinerary was to RAF Catterick.

Green Jackets move breaks Gibraltar link

THE departure of the rear party of the 3rd Battalion, The Royal Green Jackets on March 19 marked the end of the presence of a permanently-based British battalion on the Rock after a period spanning 287 years.

Operational duties have been taken over by the Gibraltar Regiment.

The regiment now consists of HQ Company, known as Thomson's Battery after its first commanding officer in the Second World War; a company of Regulars recruited locally, including some former soldiers from other regiments; and two companies of Territorial Army personnel.

Before the main party of 3 RGJ departed, responsibility for guarding The Convent, residence of the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, was formally handed over to the Gibraltar Regiment.

The RGJ has moved from one historic fortress to another. Their new home is Connaught Barracks, Dover.

Trabant is a winner

BERLIN Garrison's acquisition of a "potentially lethal" motor vehicle has put one of its units in line for top prize in a road safety competition.

Since the opening of borders between east and west, traffic has doubled in Berlin, making the roads much more hazardous — particularly with the influx of low-technology vehicles such as the Trabant, with drivers who lack experience of western traffic regulations.

With this in mind, the garrison now has its own Trabant to help military drivers and their spouses become more aware of the limitations of many eastern European cars.

Bought by the Berlin-based 62 Transport and Movement Squadron RCT, the black-painted Trabant has been doing the rounds of garrison units on road safety days, open days and at coffee mornings.

Those who put it through its paces are surprised at its lack of space, fuel smells, low power and poor braking ability.

The car's acquisition by the garrison caught the eye of the organisers of the P and O European Ferries road safety trophy, who have shortlisted it for this summer's British Forces Germany final. The trophy goes to the unit with the most innovative road safety idea.

Meanwhile, a first-round prize of a return ticket for car and four passengers awarded to the unit will be up for grabs in the garrison's own road safety competition in July.

The ticket was presented to the Berlin Brigade Commander, Brig David Bromhead, on March 7 by P and O Area Sales Manager Mr Tom Graham.

BIG DAY FOR LITTLE KATIE

ALL in all it was an exciting few days for Katie Lea, 7, whose father is a Gazelle pilot with 7 Flight Army Air Corps based at RAF Gatow, Berlin.

On March 16 she met the Queen Mother, who was spending the weekend with the 1st Battalion, Irish Guards... and three days later her father arrived back from operational flying duties in the Gulf.

It had been hoped that Sgt

Christopher Lea would be back in time to meet the royal visitor with bouquet presenter Katie and mother Aileen, but there was a last minute change in flight schedule.

The Queen Mother, visiting Berlin to celebrate St Patrick's Day with 1 IG, was met at Gatow by the British Ambassador to Germany, Sir Christopher Mallaby, and Lady Mallaby. Among those greeting her was Brig David Webb-Carter, Regimental Lieutenant Colonel of the Irish Guards.

St Patrick's Day itself was celebrated as a private regimental occasion with a parade at Wavell Barracks, Berlin, home of the Irish Guards. The Queen Mother has built up a close friendship with the regiment over many years and during the parade presented each soldier with a sprig of shamrock.

Connor, 1 IG's Irish wolfhound mascot, also received a sprig.

This traditional gift from the Queen Mother to the regiment has been distributed in person on many occasions.

After the parade, at which the regimental band of the Irish Guards played, the royal visitor met wives of men from other Berlin-based regiments serving in the Gulf.

Cheshires in Fermanagh

THE 1st Battalion, The Cheshire Regiment deployed to Co Fermanagh in mid-March following the decision of the Northern Ireland Secretary Mr Peter Brooke to close the Derryard and Boa Island permanent vehicle checkpoints on the border.

The battalion's first task, together with the 1st Battalion, The Duke of Edinburgh's Royal Regiment, was to provide cover for the teams of engineers employed in dismantling the posts.

Gen Sir Peter to be adviser

SIR PETER de la Billière has been appointed Middle East Adviser to the Ministry of Defence with particular reference to studying the lessons of the Gulf campaign. He has also been promoted full general.

He was a lieutenant-general and commanding South East District when the Gulf crisis developed and was appointed Commander British Forces Middle East.

As well as providing advice on defence issues in the region following the liberation of

Gen Sir Peter de la Billière

Kuwait, Sir Peter will assist all three Services in their analyses of the whole deployment of the campaign.

He will also be available, with a small presentation team, to speak to specialised institutes and to wide interest audiences. He will fill his new post for a year.

Sir Peter, who was commissioned into the Durham Light Infantry in 1952 and subsequently spent much of his career with the Special Air Service Regiment, had been about to retire last November.

RGJ winner

WINNER of the Hewitt Trophy for shooting, contested annually by JNCOs of the 1st Battalion, The Royal Green Jackets, based in Osnabrück, was Cpl J C Nichol, of HQ Company. The trophy is named after a lance corporal murdered in Northern Ireland in 1987.

Six days earlier the Princess spent an hour with the families of 29 Transport and Movements Regiment RCT at South Cerney, Gloucestershire. The regiment processes all Army passengers and freight for travel by air and detachments have been based in the Gulf since August

KILLED ON ACTIVE SERVICE

THE bodies of eight military personnel killed on active service during the Gulf war were flown home on March 19.

Soldiers' and airmen's families were joined at RAF Brize Norton by the Duke of Kent, Armed Forces Minister Archie Hamilton, and senior Army and RAF officers.

A guard of honour was mounted by representative detachments from the Armed Services, and the RAF Band Germany was present.

Among the deceased were the following members of the Special Air Service, listed under their parent regiment or corps:

Gurkha sappers smother Gen Sir George Cooper in garlands during his visit to the Queen's Gurkha Engineers in Hong Kong. Gen Cooper, who was Adjutant General in 1981-84, has been Colonel of the regiment for the past ten years, the longest-serving Colonel in QGE history. At the end of last month he was succeeded by Maj Gen Richard Peck, the Engineer in Chief.

The men in this montage reckon they may be a bit special. They are all former National Servicemen and their combined service totals 331 years.

Can any other unit do better?

They don't look that old!

A young TA officer serving with 201 (Northern) General Hospital RAMC at Newcastle has to be a bit careful when he addresses his commanding officer. "Reporting for duty, Dad!" hasn't got quite the right ring about it, so 2nd Lt Bibek Banerjee has to remind himself to call the boss "Sir". The CO is Col Ram Banerjee, Bibek's father.

Col Banerjee's three years in command were due to end this month, but he has held on in post because the new CO, Lt Col Jeremy Feggetter, has been serving in the Gulf.

Back to Kuwait?

Territorial Army soldier Lt Paul Phillips of Cleveland-based D Company, 4th Battalion, The Parachute Regiment could be making his way to Kuwait just as the 1st Armoured Division is leaving the Gulf.

But Paul is not expecting to parachute into the desert kingdom. Four years ago he installed many of the pipelines blasted by Saddam Hussein's retreating army, and now his company may be involved in repairing them.

They're our men in Kuwait City

A TEAM of British soldiers has set up camp in the grounds of our recently-liberated embassy in Kuwait City to get the residence back on its feet.

The embassy guard force, commanded by Maj Andrzej Frank, RA, is mainly from gunners and sappers originally tasked as in-theatre replacements for the 1st Armoured Division.

They are supported by elements from REME, RCT, ACC and the RAMC.

Battery Sgt Maj Robert Newsam explained: "We have been helping to tidy up and we provide protection support for the Ambassador, Mr Michael Weston.

"We have also been giving aid to a number of British expatriates. More than 50 remained in hiding during the Iraqi occupation. We have been able to supply them with essentials such as food, nappies, gas for cooking and water."

SSgt Bob Lecuirot, ACC baked a birthday cake for a one-year-old British child, while another soldier drew a birthday card.

Expats survived in Kuwait City on pasta and rice, so bars of compo ration chocolate have gone down well with the children.

Maj Frank and BSM Newsam formed the advance party of the guard force and arrived at the embassy just as members of the Special Forces were abseiling onto the roof to check for booby traps.

Soon afterwards SSgt Chris Gregg, RE and his team of sappers were busy repairing the damage – including a temporary front door to replace the one blown in by the SBS during their operation to secure the compound.

Brig Christopher Hammerbeck pauses for a drink – alcohol-free beer – with men of his brigade just a few days before the ground offensive began

A remarkable campaign

BRIG Christopher Hammerbeck, Commander of 4 Armoured Brigade, has spoken of his pre-battle worries about the possibility of sustaining heavy casualties.

In an interview with SOLDIER, he said: "I would be stupid if I said that in the days preceding the invasion of Iraq I hadn't wrestled with my innermost feelings over casualties. Of course I had, but I was totally confident in what I was about to do.

"I had rehearsed my brigade three times and knew the quality of my officers and soldiers," he said.

The 4th Armoured Brigade crossed the line of departure around 1930 at two points – the main brigade at axis Hawk in the north led by the 14th/20th King's Hussars, and in the south at axis Tartan led by the 1st Battalion, The Royal Scots.

Commander 4 Brigade describes the attack

Their immediate objective was the destruction of an enemy armoured reserve brigade 45 kilometres east of where 4 Brigade had swept through the Iraqi main defences.

Brig Hammerbeck admitted: "To begin with, things did not go as I would have wished. It was pitch black, pouring with rain and, shortly after crossing the start line, we ran into the tail of a massive convoy of lorries.

"It was difficult for us to make our way through and on to our objectives. We were delayed for about one hour.

"Moving east, we then attacked, off the line of march, a number of objectives which we hadn't entirely anticipated being there. The 14th/20th destroyed a signals and artillery unit north of Objective Bronze and the Royal Scots took out an artillery battery at the eastern end.

"Having cleared this to make room for divisional logistic units to move into, I forced the 14th/20th on and they attacked the southern end of Objective Copper. The northern end was cleared and attacked by 7 Armoured Brigade.

"The southern end, which we had been told contained probably a maximum of a company, actually held an armour-heavy battle group of around 25 tanks, together with APCs, guns and logistic vehicles.

"Around midnight, the 14th/20th battle group came into contact with these. Nothing could be detected with the naked eye and the only way of seeing anything was through thermal imaging systems."

Challenger main battle tanks went into action, and immediately a number of enemy tanks were hit, burst into flames and blew up. A running fight developed as British troops fought their way through the position.

To the south, the Royal Scots were clearing their objective, but both battle groups were delayed by large numbers of prisoners-of-war.

● Turn to next page

Trenches cleared by CLAW

The two battle groups arrived on the start line for the main attack of the first 24 hours – Objective Brass. It was a large position and contained the major portion of the Iraqi 52nd Armoured Brigade.

In the west, it consisted of an infantry-heavy battle group, a company of about a dozen tanks and two companies of APCs – the Russian carrier known as MTLB – in berms. In front of these, Iraqi companies were hidden in revetments and dug-outs. They were very deeply entrenched.

In the centre was a heavy armoured battle group of up to 30 tanks, 40 MTLBs, as well as artillery pieces and other elements. There was more artillery to the east of the position.

"I had ordered 1 Royal Scots to attack Objective Brass 1. They actually drove on to enemy positions under a continuous air burst laid down by 26 Field Regiment, Royal Artillery," said Brig Hammerbeck.

The bombardment was stopped and the commanding officer of 1 RS dismounted A Company who cleared the trenches using grenades and CLAW – the close assault weapon. Very quickly the enemy started to surrender and by 1200 the attack had proved a total success.

"Meanwhile, the 14th/20th battle groups had attacked Brass 2. This involved a very long approach march of some 10km. I know, because I was with them, that it was really scary. Nobody likes to approach over that sort of distance in tanks and we were expecting to be attacked at any time."

Within an hour the British formation had totally subdued this enormous position spread over 30 square kilometres, and destroyed large numbers of enemy vehicles.

"The 3rd Battalion, The Royal Regiment of Fusiliers took Brass 3 by 1500.

"Around that time we had that awful attack from the air by American A10 tank-buster aircraft which led to the death of nine of my soldiers, the wounding of a further seven, and the destruction of two Warriors.

"It was very sad and, paradoxically, it was caused by the very people who had made the whole campaign so trouble-free by the effectiveness of their air attacks.

"We quickly got over this. That did not mean we weren't saddened by it and upset, but we had to get on and maintain the momentum of the battle."

While fresh orders were issued to battle groups to ready themselves for an attack on Objective Tungsten that night (February 26), Brig Hammerbeck was briefed by his staff on the achievements of his brigade.

In less than 20 hours, they had advanced 120km, destroyed the 52nd Armoured Brigade and captured up to 4,000 prisoners, including the commanders of the Iraqi 48th Infantry Division and the 52nd.

For the attack on Tungsten, with two battle groups – the Royal Scots to the north and 3 RRF in the south – the brigade was regrouped.

The Royal Scots and 3rd Fusiliers battle groups each consisted of two squadrons of tanks and two of infantry, while the 14th/20th, which had seen the heaviest fighting, was placed in reserve with two companies of infantry.

To get to Objective Tungsten, the brigade would have to cross the tapline road, beyond which was a large overground pipeline 2m high. To overcome this, large numbers of sappers were attached to the two battle groups.

Brig Hammerbeck said: "We saw it being a very formal operation with us achieving crossings over the tapline, and then subsequently breaking out into the objective which we believed held a brigade plus, before the ground campaign started.

"To support this I arranged with CO 2 Field Regiment RA for us to have a large and impressive artillery bombardment. I was given effectively two brigades of Arty. From the US Army, we got the National Guard 142nd Artillery Brigade with two batteries each of MLRS and M110. By golly, they were good."

The brigade also had the use of divisional artillery resources – 39 Heavy Regiment RA, 26 Field Regiment RA and 2 Field Regiment RA. Altogether, the British contribution was two batteries of MLRS, two of M110 and five batteries of M109.

"That adds up to a lot of gun tubes. I motored forward, perhaps a little too quickly, and arrived at the same time as my recce troops.

"I was able to see the bombardment laid down in front of me. It was a sight I shall remember for the rest of my days. To my left MLRS from 39 Heavy were firing and those of the 142nd were firing over my head.

"For 45 minutes, there was what I can only describe as a running roar as MLRS submunitions exploded in a carpet right the way across the full depth of the enemy position.

"It would go away and then flow back to catch people as they came out, and I could see the enemy's ammunition on the gun positions exploding as battery after battery was destroyed."

As soon as the bombardment ceased, the Royal Scots and 3rd Fusiliers battle groups, which had found a crossing point over the pipeline, launched themselves at the artillery positions. In a short time all surviving guns had been knocked out.

"Talking to an Iraqi artillery commander after the war, he told me that 90 per cent of his crews on that position had been killed or wounded when this initial bombardment had gone in.

"He lost more than 70 guns in the space of an hour, which was a pretty major achievement," said Brig Hammerbeck.

Throughout the night the two battle groups worked their way across a series of enemy positions until, by first light, all had been subdued except one.

Here the commanding officer of 1 Royal Scots, Lt Col Iain Johnstone, felt the best way of clearing the position would be by a combination of cajolery and force.

He got 2 Field Regiment to fire three rounds of 155mm on to the target. Then he used interpreters and loudspeaker broadcasts from one of the Psyps (Psychological Warfare Operations) vehicles to call upon the enemy to surrender.

The Iraqis refused to be cowed and the procedure was repeated again and again. Three rounds fired followed by calls for them to surrender.

Eventually the enemy did surrender, but only after, as a subsequent interrogation revealed, their company commander had been killed.

"This conflicts with what people may have heard or read about in the national press, that Iraqi officers deserted their men. It was simply not true.

"I captured a large number of officers of all ranks and station, and I am quite clear in my own mind that these regiments were properly officered," said Brig Hammerbeck.

"It's simply nonsense to say there were no officers, certainly in the area we were advancing through."

What condition were the prisoners in?

"They looked fine, well-fed and well-equipped. It was the middle of the night and it was raining, but they all had pullovers, reasonable uniforms and all had shoes on.

"There was an awful lot of rubbish talked about the state of these guys. They were not starved. They hadn't had a lot to eat in the previous three days, but that was because of the air campaign sealing off their logistics.

"You only had to go into their dug-outs to see they were comfortable and warm, and I formed the opinion that on the whole they were well motivated.

"They were a bit hacked off about being put in the bag and you always get that woebegone down-at-heel look. I guess that if some of my soldiers had been captured, they would probably have had the same look upon their faces.

"Let there be no illusions. My regiments had to fight their way into those objectives and the enemy were fighting back. There is a great theory that no shots were fired and that the Iraqis were rushing out to surrender. That is simply not true.

"On all the objectives we attacked, the resistance was initially quite stiff. We were just better than they were, in our equipment and in our ability to fight, which is why we were able to do what I instructed my commanding officers to do. Stand off at distance and destroy the enemy vehicles before moving on to an objective.

"When I went back over the battlefields with the CO of the 14th/20th I was surprised at the size of the enemy positions and the numbers of vehicles we had destroyed. I gather we faced some of the largest objectives of anybody," said Brig Hammerbeck.

At Tungsten, 4 Armoured Brigade had run into the remnants of the Iraqi 12th Armoured Division and reserves from the Iraqi 25th Infantry Division, and taken up to 3,000 prisoners, including a divisional commander.

Having replenished and declared his brigade ready to advance, Brig Hammerbeck was faced with a day-long wait for new orders. This was because there was uncertainty about what was going on in the rest of the Corps area.

The brigade was instructed to move 40km to the north and Brig Hammerbeck was warned of two possible tasks during the following 24 hours.

"The first option was to attack north up the general line

'There is a great theory that no shots were fired and that the Iraqis were rushing out to surrender. That is simply not true.'

of the Wadi-Al-Batin to seal off the Republican Guard just to the west of Basra.

"The second, and more likely, was, with significant enhancements from divisional engineer resources, to attack south and open the supply routes up the Wadi.

"I have to confess I was less than enthusiastic about this last option because it seemed to me that it would take us out of the war, and involve us in a game that could end with us taking fairly significant casualties," he explained.

In the event, 4 Brigade was rapidly advanced the next morning to secure an objective as part of a divisional operation to close the Kuwait-to-Basra road more than 100km away. It was halted just a few kilometres short of its objective when the cessation of hostilities was announced.

"It had been a remarkable campaign. We had advanced around 350km in 97 hours. A tempo and speed of 3km per hour in battle is not inconsiderable. We had been responsible for the destruction or immobilisation of three divisions, one of which had been armoured, captured three Div commanders, four brigade commanders and between 5,000 and 8,000 prisoners. The brigade had destroyed up to 60 tanks, and a mass of APCs, guns and other vehicles.

"On our own part, we never had less than 94 per cent of our tanks on the road and, indeed, ended the battle with 53 tanks running out of the total of 59. Over that distance, it is a remarkable figure.

"The Warrior had run well and we were never more than two down out of our total of 155. Its performance was quite remarkable."

Summing up Operation Desert Sabre and 4 Armoured Brigade's part in it, Brig Hammerbeck said: "We had been really lucky. My worst fears had not been realised. We had very sadly lost nine soldiers from the 3 RRF battle group, seven had been wounded, and on that final day of the war we lost one man from the Royal Scots.

"It was nothing short of miraculous and I breathed a deep sigh of relief."

It's already earned it's stripes.

CAR OF THE YEAR 1991

The new Renault Clio has been voted 'Car of the Year 1991' by Europe's top motoring journalists.

It won because of it's class-beating combination of spaciousness, ride-quality, performance and quietness which make it feel like a much bigger car. Renault's famous ENERGY petrol engines, which are all equipped with catalytic convertors, also play their part.

But when you're making a tax-free purchase, you have the choice of the entire Renault range, from the nippy Renault 5 Campus, stylish Renault 19, to the roomy Renault 21 and luxurious Renault 25.

And because Renault are a strong force throughout Europe you won't face any obstacles when it comes to export. Renault can assist you with all the delivery, shipping, registration and Customs and Excise administration needed to complete your purchase.

FROM THE BATTLEFIELD

IN the last issue we published accounts of the fighting in Iraq as told to Laurie Manton by officers and men of 7 Armoured Brigade. Now it is the turn of soldiers of 4 Armoured Brigade.

What follow are eye-witness recollections by the commanding officer and men of the Warrior-equipped 1st Battalion, The Royal Scots (The Royal Regiment), and the Challenger-tank equipped 14th/20th King's Hussars.

They remember their feelings as they came under fire . . . the confusion of fighting at night . . . the devastating effect of their weapons.

Not a good start as convoy cut Jocks in two

● Lt Col Iain Johnstone, CO 1 RS:

"OPERATION Desert Sabre went very well, but it didn't get off to a particularly good start.

"It was very dark and it was raining, and just as we crossed the start line an enormous convoy of artillery trucks came right through the middle and split us in two.

"At our first objective (Bronze), I brought up B Company who engaged with 30mm and chain gun, and it then appeared somebody was going to surrender. There had been a degree of enemy fire, but it's very difficult to know exactly what's coming at you when you are closed down inside a Warrior.

"We debussed B Company but found that it is almost impossible to take prisoners at night because you can't see anything. We put up white light.

"Some of the enemy were surrendering, some weren't, so we started clearing some of the bunkers to encourage them to surrender.

"Slowly but surely, it became apparent that if we could find a way of getting them out, we could continue on without further bloodshed, but we were in a bit of a hurry. The illuminations were beginning to run out so we started using the headlights on some of the vehicles, and that seemed to work quite well.

"On our way to Brass, we hit another enemy position. Behind them was a convoy of vehicles we took to be enemy, but couldn't quite make it out. There were certainly no friendly forces supposed to be there, but we were concerned they might be blue so we didn't engage them.

"We took on a close-quarter position instead. The enemy suffered some horrific casualties and we had to patch them up.

"The dilemma we faced was that we were in a hurry to get on, but we also had a responsibility to treat the wounded, some of whom had limbs blown off.

"The doctor worked very quickly, the padre had to bury some, and we just stuffed the rest in the back of our ambulances and took them with us until we could put them in the ordinary Allied casevac chain.

"I understand all but one survived. They were jolly lucky, I think.

"It transpired that the convoy of vehicles we had seen was a British dressing station. It is just as well we didn't engage them, although we had every right to do so because they were not in the area they should have been.

"A Company then swung round and landed on the enemy position just as the last artillery rounds were landing, which was the ultimate in armoured infantry shock action.

"As soon as the enemy had recovered from the artillery barrage, they were actually at rifle point and were not in a position to offer any resistance at all.

"Without satellite navigation, I don't think it would have been possible to carry out our very quick switches in direction as a formation.

"The prisoners were astonished to find we were British. I don't know what scenario had been painted to them, but they expected the Saudi Arabians. They were also astonished to find that we could move by formation at night, and therefore weren't prepared for us.

"My most lasting memories will be the quiet tapping of enemy small arms fire striking the side of my Warrior, the sight of enemy T55 tanks blowing up on the skyline, and the image of hundreds of Iraqis rising up to surrender as we passed by."

Lt Col Iain Johnstone "at home" in the desert. He and his men lived and slept beside their Warrior fighting vehicles

FROM THE BATTLEFIELD

'We went hell-for-leather through the enemy position, firing on the move'

● Maj John Potter, Commanding B Coy, 1 RS:

"WE started engaging the enemy MTLBs (Soviet-made armoured personnel carriers) from the rear and we were shooting through their back doors. As we started, I heard our tank squadron report contact with T55s on the objectives. That meant I was between the enemy T55s and the MTLBs and our tanks were behind.

"It had the recipe for a real bugger's-muddle so I pulled the company firing line back until the tanks reported they had knocked out the T55s.

"I managed to get an intimate support troop of tanks chopped over to me and got them lined up with us. We then went hell-for-leather straight through the enemy position firing on the move, brassing up the bunkers and slapping rounds into MTLBs.

"It was very strange moving forward with such low visibility. Mortars were firing ahead of us and adding to the obscurity, so I rolled them back so I could see what the hell was going on. It was a very eerie sensation looking through the sights. Just feeling rather than hearing the sound of the tanks firing, picking up the sound of small arms fire pinging off the side of the vehicle.

"Using the night sight, you could actually see the muzzle flash and pick out where people were firing from. With its monochrome-green effect, it was like an arcade game, watching RPG fire go across your front and seeing rounds being fired.

"What does brassing up a bunker mean? We'd pick a bunker and then open up with chain gun. If we got any fire returned, we would then reply with 30mm Rarden cannon, putting in three rounds of HE, the accuracy of the cannon being such that you can actually put them in through the opening in the bunker.

"Basically, the whole company would stop in a line and fire on the one bunker, which was a bit like using a sledgehammer to crack a nut, but we weren't messing about.

"One poor chap decided even after we'd brassing up his bunker with chain gun, it was worth firing another couple of rounds. All 14 Warriors fired 30mm HE at him. He didn't do it again."

Pte Tam Gow

Grenade blasted armour

● Sgt Thomas Gorrian, 5 Platoon sergeant:

"We debussed and got into an assault formation to storm a trench and noticed a dug-in MTLB which had to be taken out. Myself and Pte Tam Gow pushed forward with CLAW. The grenade went through the turret and out the back door and obliterated the whole inside of the vehicle.

"It will penetrate armour plate so it made mincemeat of the MTLB. Afterwards we followed up with white phosphorous - that's a kind of smoke grenade that basically fries everything inside. It's pretty effective."

The Royal Scots cut their Land Rovers down to give them a lower profile

● Pte Tam Gow, 2iC Callsign 21:

"I CRAWLED up to the edge of the bunker containing the MTLB. I sat up and fired in a CLAW from 15 metres.

"I never saw it explode, I had my head down."

CLAW took priority over bayonets

● Lt Alistair Stobie, 5 Platoon Commander:

"AS part of the Company SOPs (Standard Operating Procedures) we lead from the front the whole way. We were given the nod from the boss to engage some dismounted infantry and so we upped sticks in our wagons and drove ahead of the tanks.

"Being the first contact we'd had, the old ticker was going quite fast.

"I dismounted Callsign 21 and all sorts of firefights went on. You kept coming across stuff you couldn't see from the wagon and it got slightly hairy. There was not much cover once you had dismounted. Except for the odd berm, you were

Cpl Grant McCulloch

● Cpl Grant McCulloch, Section Commander Callsign 21:

"OUR main objective at Brass was the Iraqi 12th Brigade. We took some effective enemy fire on the vehicle. People say fire is effective when you take casualties. As far as I am concerned it is effective when it comes my way.

"By the time we debussed it was cold and wet - ideal conditions for the Jocks. We carried out a quick systematic trench clearance.

"We are normally quite wary about rushing into trenches that could be full of anti-personnel mines or booby traps, so what we did was

Cold and wet, ideal for Jock

CLAW it, L2 it (normal high explosive grenade) and just follow up with white phos...

"After making an appreciation of the situation, you go in and rake it, clearing whatever bits are in your way. Its as simple as that.

"The effect is devastating."

completely exposed. We cleared the enemy positions using a mix of HE and phosphorous. You can't use it in confined spaces so we put our weapons on automatic and just got in there.

"CLAW was excellent. It gave us a 'further-than-you-could-throw' grenade which meant we could put down some fairly unpleasant fire about the enemy from a range of around 100 metres.

"To aim it we used the Susat sight with an element of SWAG (scientific wild-arsed guess)!

"No bayonets were used because the CLAW fitment took priority, but I'm sure they would have loved a bit of Jock cold steel about them."

14th/20th KING'S HUSSARS

My gunner brewed up a T55

● Lt Col Michael Vickery, CO 14th/20th King's Hussars:

"B SQUADRON went off and had a look at the contact, and then I moved up with them to see what it was. It looked as if it was just infantry who were firing at us with the odd machine gun.

"If anybody fired a machine gun at us, they got a HESH round back, which tended to shut them up.

"There were some T55s and we threw up artillery fire and some of our own tank fire. I know my own gunner got a direct hit on a T55 - straight through and right beside the gun - and it brewed up quite well.

"Going back to Objective Bronze after the battle, we found that the tank we had knocked out had actually fired five rounds. I didn't know that at the time, so we did collect some incoming although they were not very good shots. They were firing at us outside their best range.

"Operating closed down is a very interesting experience. It's quiet and you don't hear the incoming fire or weaponry.

"Indeed, when you are looking through the thermal imager, you don't see the incoming fire either, so the whole thing is really passionless.

"When looking at the tank we knocked out, I am afraid I wasn't worried about it. It was them or us, so there weren't any personal feelings."

It's a bit like space invaders

● Lt Stephen Bryant, 1st Troop D Squadron:

"IN total we fired off about 30 rounds in my tank.

"It seems unreal operating closed down. Through TOGS (Thermal Observation Gunnery Sight) you just see people running around on the TV screen.

"It's a bit like space invaders really. You are not shooting at tanks or people, you are just shooting at blips on the screen.

"It's quite disorientating.

Inside (the tank) you are looking sideways, but in fact the sight is looking forwards. Then there is the turret swinging around you and, of course, the hull drives off in another direction.

"We favoured fin rounds. Looking at the T55s afterwards, quite often you could see through the hole where it had gone in one side and out the other. The heat would have destroyed what was inside anyway, and set fire to it."

DEVASTATING

● Cpl Dave Slade, 1st Troop D Squadron:

"THE effect on the tanks was devastating. There was nothing left - absolutely horrendous. I don't think anyone could have lived through that. You think you are safe encased by steel, but you're not.

"It turns the interiors white hot. That's not a very nice situation to be in."

SBC – That's big business

FAR-reaching innovations introduced by the Services Booking Centre – the Ministry of Defence travel agency now in its 21st year – could more than double its spending clout to about £55m a year, writes Jennifer Griffiths.

From its offices on the Embankment overlooking the Thames, SBC last year spent £25m on travel for 200,000 Servicemen and women and MoD civil servants.

Because of its expertise at hard bargaining with 20 airlines, it is being urged to take over travel arrangements for all Government departments. This would significantly enhance its corporate buying power.

At present its other main tasks include preparing the documentation for movement of about 10,000 families. It also provides passports and visas.

Operation Granby has kept the department especially busy. Many passengers with last-minute, priority requests enjoyed the benefit of the booking centre's excellent relationship with foreign embassy staffs, enabling visas to be granted at very short notice.

SBC also arranges schoolchildren's visits for Defence personnel serving abroad and is the focal point for all indulgence travel from the United Kingdom.

A major departure from routine has been the opening of a Leisure Travel Unit in conjunction with a major airline, offering personal and leisure travel discounts worldwide. Despite the Gulf war, the unit has completed business worth £100,000 since October.

'In a survey of 70 bucket shops offering low-price European deals, we were not undercut once.'

The facility offers a second option to someone who has been refused an indulgence flight, though 40 per cent of the annual 30,000 applicants do get a seat.

The indulgence facility is to be extended to a 24-hour call-forward service, starting in late summer.

It will be provided by the Joint Services Air Trooping Centre, which will operate out-of-hours, calling people forward to fill seats which suddenly become available when an unscheduled flight is laid on in an emergency.

SBC is one of the prime movers behind a scheme in which Gulf personnel can take a holiday for two for the price of one. And the centre hopes to extend further into the competitive holiday market.

Recent investment in the sophisticated £100,000 telephone system and additional computer facilities has brought greater efficiency to SBC. Telephone bookings are replacing the old card and signal system, giving an immediate, wider choice of value-for-money travel options.

A publicity drive aimed at dispelling criticisms of SBC includes visits by staff who use the service.

SBC has a tri-Service staff of ten and 60 civil servants led by Wing Commander Mike Yule, whose enthusiasm for his work is infectious. His foresight and drive has brought about a metamorphosis at SBC, but he modestly puts it down to "being in the right place at the right time".

He would welcome the opportunity to handle all Government travel because it would give greater corporate buying power – which means better deals on both duty and leisure travel.

"It is an enormous untapped area. There are 500,000 entitled civil servants and Service personnel in MoD alone, and that is without taking into account their spouses and dependants. It is big business," he explained.

"In a survey of 70 bucket shops offering low-price European deals, we were not undercut once.

"It must be remembered that though these bucket shop prices seem very competitive, they do not always bear scrutiny.

"We can negotiate very attractive deals. We can do anything that the travel industry can do, and we should be able to do it better. The future looks very bright," said Wg Cdr Yule.

Sgt Brown nose how to raise cash

Good move at Bulford

NEARLY 40 soldiers – male and female – put their best feet forward at Bulford Camp to raise £600 for Children in Need.

They took part in a strenuous two-hour aerobics session.

Cpl Tina Rigby (243 Signal Squadron, Bulford), LCpl Nikki Pearce (WRAC HQ UKLF Support Unit, Wilton) and LCpl Teresa Oliver (AAC Middle Wallop) organised the event, and even charged spectators to boost the coffers.

Army Careers Information Officer staff at Surbiton put together a highly attractive package of events for the BBC Children in Need appeal and asked Derek Jameson to auction it on his early morning radio programme.

Highest bidder was David Williams, a former soldier and TA officer from Northampton. He and his wife and two children were accommodated at a London hotel, given a guided tour of the Tower and shown over the museum of the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers.

The warrant officers and sergeants of the 5th Battalion, The Light Infantry (Volunteers) and their wives have raised nearly £500 for the Shropshire and Mid Wales Hospice in Shrewsbury. Their latest donation of £248 – raised by the mess during carol singing sessions in the town – was handed over to the hospice by WO1 (RSM) Doug Hosking.

Army cadets at St Ives appealed for cash and goodies to support British troops in the Gulf – and hit the jackpot. The 53-strong ACF detachment (Lt Leslie Wooller) was inundated with offers of help from the local community and sent off more than 200 parcels and about £3,000.

Look out for Maj (Retd) Paddy Kersting in the London Marathon on April 21. The 56-year-old curator of the Household Cavalry Museum at Windsor is running to raise funds for his museum, which is supported entirely from voluntary contributions.

Yanks knew a good thing

Inset: Brig Barry Bloxham. Above: The Army Catering Corps celebrates its 50th birthday with a parade through Aldershot

The work goes on...

BRIG Barry Bloxham, Director Army Catering Corps, told SOLDIER that he was delighted that officers and men had performed exceptionally well in the Gulf, but that he wouldn't have expected anything else... "that's our raison d'être".

The fact that high standards had been achieved when such conditions had not been encountered for several years made it doubly gratifying.

He was at pains to stress that however creditable the achievements of the Corps in the Middle East might be, the work of the ACC was going on world-wide every day, and nowhere was it more important than in Ulster, where individuals were sometimes providing a service spanning 24 hours.

"There are certain scenarios in Northern Ireland which epitomise the role of the ACC soldier chef in supporting our troops.

"Recently I visited a sangar in South Armagh where an infantry platoon was being catered for by a single lance-corporal chef working underground. Using largely composite rations he managed to produce a wonderful variety of food and he really was the hub of the little base.

"Life, as far as the soldiers on duty were concerned, largely revolved round what he was going to produce for their next meal."

The troops in South Armagh could look forward to something more substantial than might have been provided when Brig Bloxham joined the ACC in 1956.

Then the daily scale for a soldier included 3½ ounces of meat, "bone in".

"By the time that had been prepared and cooked you ended up with about two ounces on your plate," said the brigadier. "If you were to compare it with today's portions you would think you were on starvation rations."

Looking into the future, he said that though the Army was facing a period of change, whatever emerged from Options for Change and the Logistics Support Review, in the final analysis wherever an army had to fight it also had to be fed under operational conditions. The best people to do that were the officers and men of the ACC.

Few soldiers would argue with that.

trained in catering supervision and direction, and deploying experienced and skilled chefs.

The most genuine tribute paid to the Corps was the speed with which American soldiers passing through British camps joined any "chow line".

And yet it wasn't always like that.

There was a time when even convicts sneered at redcoats who received, according to one authority, only poor quality brown bread instead of the white loaves given to the gaolbirds.

In Edwardian days the faintly rebellious words put to one bugle call were "Officers wives get puddings and pies, soldiers wives get skilly."

"Skilly", a thin soup made of oatmeal and water "flavoured" with meat, is no longer on the menu.

Army cuisine probably reached a peak of notoriety during the First World War, when meals were prepared by regimental cooks who until as late as 1922 were simply detailed for the job regardless of qualification.

After that a small hutted unit was set up in Aldershot and designated the Army Cookery School.

Even so, most men ate meals in their barrack rooms (hence the table-scrubbing ritual which most old soldiers will recall).

Until just before the Second World War a soldier received two meals a day. Both were regarded as parades, so that to miss one was an offence.

"Did you have breakfast lad?" was the kindly but treacherous question always asked of any youngster who collapsed on a cold morning.

There was also tea, which was not compulsory, and for his evening meal he had to rely on his own devices, probably the Naafi.

Things changed in 1938 when the War Minister, Mr Hore-Belisha, invited Sir Isidore Salmon, head of J Lyons and Co, the most famous popular restaurant chain of the day, to become honorary catering adviser to the Army.

Though given a room at the War Office, he spent more time at Aldershot where he reorganised the school, introduced expert lecturers from the Savoy and Grosvenor House Hotels, and brought in a chief instructor from Westminster Technical College who was quickly commissioned and rose to senior rank.

He also persuaded the authorities to build what became the Army Catering Corps Training Centre, which took its first students in Autumn 1940. The Corps itself was formed on March 22, 1941, coming under the overall control of the Royal Army Service Corps until 1965 when it became independent.

The ACC reached a strength of 50,000 during the Second World War, when its soldiers manned captured Italian guns during the defence of Tobruk and used their weapons to good effect in other theatres (all ACC personnel are trained as soldiers first, tradesmen second).

Today the Corps consists of 170 officers and 4,300 men and women, serving wherever there are British troops. Its reputation has never been higher, as the American attachments to our cookhouse queues showed.

After all, the proof is in the pudding . . .

Time for a rethink on the family front

— Lord Bramall

A VERY pertinent point was made by Field Marshal Lord Bramall during an address to the European-Atlantic Group in Parliament.

After dealing with the savings and cuts which are expected to happen due to the changes in the political scene, he said:

"So savings there must be in Germany within the sensible framework of wider security guarantees and balanced reductions all round, and this would give us a chance to tackle, certainly to streamline if not to disband, our very large family infrastructure in Germany."

He admitted it had taken him quite some time to come to this view. Modern domestic trends were coincidental with families putting down roots, buying houses, with working wives and children remaining at the same schools.

"There must," he said, "be a movement towards home stations, shorter unaccompanied service in Germany and trickle postings for the smaller number of units left there."

If this nettle were grasped considerable savings would be made.

I am sure a lot of wives will agree that permanent homes, work for women and education are key issues.

Lord Bramall is talking a great deal of sense and I would welcome letters on this subject.

VICTORY!

AFTER 14 years the last hurdle in a battle to overcome an injustice has been overcome.

Under new legislation the requirement to have lived in the UK for ten out of the last 20 years should no longer apply to members of Service families claiming severe disablement allowance.

After failing to get an amendment to the Disability Working Allowance Bill when it was before the Commons I obtained the support of Lord Swinfen, who raised the matter in the Lords in February.

In March he telephoned to say Lord Henley, Minister for the Overseas disabled ruling reversed

Disabled, had agreed to an amendment.

In a speech the Minister said the ten-in-20 year residence rule had been re-examined.

Referring to the fact that members of the Armed Forces frequently served overseas and often in situations of great danger, he declared that it was thought "only right that the structure of the social security benefits system should recognise their special position."

It was therefore proposed to amend the residence condition as it applied to the severe disablement allowance "to allow periods spent abroad by serving members of Her Majesty's Armed Forces and their families to be treated as resident in Great Britain for the purposes of qualifying for SDA".

The necessary regulations would, he said, be made at the first suitable opportunity later in the year.

Lord Swinfen, thanking the Minister for "a piece of good news", suggested he might consider the question of Crown servants in general in respect of SDA allowance and was told the issue was being considered.

I was first involved in this struggle in 1974 when it took a considerable time to win an allowance for a wife.

Later the right to receive benefit while overseas was won and then the right to apply while overseas.

For this latest advance let me say "Thank you, Minister".

Patriot homes in on target

RBL aims to manage 200 houses

A FIRM of stockbrokers, William de Broc, has launched a scheme to raise millions to buy houses for letting to ex-Servicemen in the South of England.

Called the Patriot Business Expansion Scheme, it has raised £10m from private investors to buy up to 200 houses which the Royal British Legion Housing Association will manage, buying them from Patriot BES after five years.

An investment specialist writing in a national newspaper has described it as a "superb deal" and failed to find any snags in it.

John Atkin, chairman of the RBLHA, has welcomed it warmly:

"If we can achieve our goal of between 94 and 200 houses we will be very happy. It is hoped to buy small groups of ready-built houses which will be managed by us."

Applicants should write to RBLHA PO Box 32,

Penn, High Wycombe, Bucks HP10 8JF.

Meanwhile, a pilot self-build scheme is currently being planned to operate in the London area, and families are being sought to form a self-build group.

It is hoped that a site being sold by the Ministry of Defence at Brookhill, Woolwich, will become the location of the first group self-build scheme specifically for serving and ex-Service personnel, single or married. Details can be obtained from Chartserve Self Build Consultants (0323 412161).

Medway puts skids under Services' house hopefuls

SERVICE families should have heard by now from the Medway Housing Society since Rochester upon Medway City Council transferred housing stock to it last summer.

The letter makes no more cheerful reading than that sent just before Christmas informing Servicemen that "in future no applications will be accepted from persons living in Armed Forces Quarters".

One individual was told: "Should you be unable to find accommodation by the time you are discharged it would be advisable for you to contact the Homeless Persons Officer of the Local Council..."

Medway Housing Society is registered as a Friendly Society.

It is independent of local authorities and housing corporations.

One way Servicemen can seek a home under the new scheme is to cite local connections, if they have any.

Under the Housing Act of 1985 the city council has a responsibility to house the homeless — and can then apply to the Medway Housing Society.

They may also be able to apply for alternative low cost housing or shared ownership.

In other words, the outlook is still extremely bleak.

Happy birthday

THE BRITISH Commonwealth Ex-Services League has just celebrated its 70th anniversary with a gathering attended by the Duke of Edinburgh, the Grand President. The League works ceaselessly to help ex-Servicemen in need. Branches are to be found in many countries. Anyone interested in joining should write to the Secretary General, BCEL, 48 Pall Mall, London SW1Y 5JG.

THE STREETWISE WAY TO WEALTH

A SELF-MADE MILLIONAIRE REVEALS HIS SECRETS

Although millionaires may be earning 10 or even 100 times more money than you, they are not 10 or 100 times smarter than you. They just know the money secret.

Let me tell you my story. Five years ago I was broke, living in a cramped rented flat and driving a rusty old Ford Escort. My clerk's salary was not enough to survive on and I was sliding into debt. I felt like a total failure.

Things are very different today. I now own a six bedroom luxury house. I drive a Porsche 911 Cabriolet (I also have a vintage Jaguar) and I usually take three overseas holidays each year - I've just recently returned from a superb 2 weeks in Japan.

So how come my drastic change in fortune? Well, five years ago I was lucky enough to meet and become close friends with a forty two year old self made multi millionaire. He taught me that it's not how hard you work that counts (many people work hard all their lives yet have nothing to show for it). What matters is the goals you set yourself, your courage and determination to achieve them, and that you work to a definite and proven plan.

He shared with me his most closely guarded business secrets and taught me a complete and proven step-by-step plan for making big money. By following his advice I became a millionaire within three years. I am now my own boss and no longer worry about money. I work less than half as many hours now than I did when I was an employee yet I earn more in one day than I used to in a month.

Some time ago a friend of mine who had recently lost his job, aware of my success, asked me how he could do as I had. I began to outline the system to show how he could do exactly the same as me. The results were amazing. Despite his having no previous business experience he made £5,160 during his first month after following my advice and nearly double that the following month. It was at this point I decided to write a complete step-by-step blueprint that would enable anyone, regardless of their age, sex or education, to earn an exceptional income providing they are of at least average intelligence and prepared to learn new ideas.

Let's get one thing straight. This programme is perfectly legal and respectable. If it wasn't, believe me, I wouldn't be involved in it.

You don't have to quit your job to start. Obviously you will want to test it first. I will show you how to get started in your spare time at home. Don't think for one minute that you can't do it - I'll prove you can. The information contained in my programme is worth many thousands of pounds and if acted upon will make you financially secure for the rest of your life.

GUARANTEE

This is not some phoney "get rich quick" scheme of the type commonly available. The information and secrets I will teach you are exactly those that I myself have used every day over the last few years to make well over a million pounds. I will tell you exactly what to do, how to do it, I'll supply you with actual names and addresses of useful contacts and I will make it all available to you for just £20. You will be overjoyed with what you receive. In fact I'm so confident you will be pleased that I offer a full money back guarantee.

If you don't think the material I send you is the best investment you've ever made and worth at least one hundred times what you paid for it, simply return everything in good condition within 30 days and I will immediately send you a full refund along with my congratulations for having at least given it a try. There will be no questions asked, no delays, just a cheerful and prompt refund! I don't want one penny of your money if you're not going to benefit from my programme.

When you order my material I will also send you - FREE OF CHARGE - 'How to develop a millionaire mentality' in which I reveal how to actually think like a millionaire. I'll show you how to acquire the strength, willpower and energy that will be so important, not only to your future financial success, but also to your enjoying a more fulfilling lifestyle. It will totally alter your attitude to life and will perhaps be the most powerful book you've ever read. Worth more than £20 by itself. It's yours to keep, even if you decide to return my programme.

You may ask why I'm willing to reveal to you all my insider secrets. Well, simply because your success is in no way any threat to my success and of course all those who order my material will be helping to increase my own wealth. But then why should you care if I make a profit so long as I show you how to achieve financial freedom? And I promise I will. I will do everything in my power to make you succeed. You can even call on me for personal guidance and answers to your individual questions. You may contact me as often as you wish and I will make no additional charge for this valuable service. What you do now is up to you. I offer a full money back guarantee so if I'm wrong all you've wasted is a few minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

A month from now you can be nothing more than 30 days older - or you can be on your way to a better life. You decide.

SWORN STATEMENT:

"On the basis of my professional relationship with Mr Scott over the past five years I can certify that all the above statements are true and factual and that Mr. Scott has a net worth in excess of one million pounds."

M. Thomas - Accountant

Below are extracts from just two of the many letters that I have received from people who have ordered my programme.

"Although I'm just 21 years old, in the past 9 months I've made over £23,000, but I was just getting started, I now expect to make that much again in the next 12 weeks!"

C.L., Bromley, Kent

"I've earned £80,000 in my first year of following your advice"

Dakota dilemma

Aldershot's most famous landmark, the DC3 Dakota aircraft outside Browning Barracks, is in a bad way.

A report by Imperial War Museum experts from Duxford has revealed that age, the weather and birds have so damaged the aircraft that it will have to be scrapped unless urgent repairs are carried out.

The Dakota, which "missed" seeing action in the Second World War by one month, has stood outside the Airborne Forces Museum at Aldershot since 1970.

But its plywood furnishings are rotting away, there is surface corrosion on the fuselage and the internal floor is unsafe.

Museum curator Mr Simon Anglim says three options are available:

- Raising a five-figure sum to have it renovated;
- Finding expert volunteers to do the work for nothing and paying only for materials;
- Scrapping the old Dakota.

The museum has recently spent about £3,500 having the canvas control surfaces repaired, paintwork touched up and a bird-scaring system installed.

Mr Anglim would be pleased to hear from benefactors. They can contact him at the Airborne Forces Museum, Browning Barracks, Aldershot, Hants GU11 2BU (tel: 0252 349619).

SOLDIER to Soldier

Fusiliers passed this way

Pebbles in the sand – the 3 RRF badge

Making its mark on the landscape is something no British regiment has been able to resist through the ages. Badges have been carved on the cliffs of the Khyber Pass, cut into the chalk of the green Fovant valley in Wiltshire, and painted and repainted on the blast walls of Security Forces bases in Northern Ireland.

The 3rd Battalion, The Royal Regiment of Fusiliers was keen to follow the pattern but the deserts of Saudi Arabia were a challenge – flat, monotonous and stretching, apparently, for ever.

RSM Bob Broadbent solved the problem by using the natural assets of one area where there were plenty of pebbles.

It was from this site that the Fusiliers set out as part of 4 Armoured Brigade for the ground offensive.

Unlike the relics on the Khyber, the badge is unlikely to remain for travellers to admire. Only Bedouin stray over this wilderness (there was evidence of camels but not much else in the area) and the dust is likely to cover up the pebbles in the storm season.

The trails cut by the RRF's Warriors were being silted up by drifting sand almost as soon as they were made. Soldiers and campaigns soon pass into history.

Get away – to Cumbria

If you are looking to get away from it all, 11th Signal Regiment might be the people to talk to.

They run an adventure training centre at Whernside, near Dent in Cumbria, the heart of North Yorkshire's national park.

A Grade 2 listed 18th century manor house and its five-acre estate provide a superb setting from which Army families can enjoy some of the best outdoor pursuit training in the country.

Private groups and families can use the manor facilities.

Accommodation, on a self-catering basis, is available in a separate cottage, the Statham Hut, at a cost of £50 a night for parties of 12.

The Howes-Wood memorial unit sleeps six and costs from £20.

The facilities are available to any unit.

More information on Whernside Adventure Training Centre is available from the OC, Lt Ashley Stocker, or the centre manager, WO2 Cook, Whernside Manor, Dent, Cumbria LA10 5RE (tel: 05875 213).

WE, THE LIMBLESS, LOOK TO YOU FOR HELP

We come from two World Wars, Korea, Kenya, Malaya, Aden, Cyprus, Ulster, The Falklands and all those areas of turmoil where peace must be restored.

Now, disabled and mainly aged, we must look to you for help. Please help by helping our Association.

BLESMA looks after the limbless from all the Services. It helps to overcome the shock of losing arms, or legs or an eye. And, for the severely handicapped, it provides Residential Homes where they can live in peace and dignity.

Help the disabled by helping BLESMA with a donation now or a legacy in the future. We promise you that not one penny will be wasted.

GREAT BATTLES OF THE BRITISH ARMY

The military book of the year

Editor-in-chief David Chandler

The finest team of military veterans and historians ever assembled, have collaborated to commemorate the 250th anniversary of the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst. Includes a foreword by HRH Field Marshal The Duke of Edinburgh, contributions from Sir John Hackett and Sir Anthony Farrar-Hockley among others and notable war artists, Terence Cuneo and Frank Wootton.

Military Small Arms of the Twentieth Century

—Ian Hogg & John Weeks—

As the world's leading reference work on subject, this title is now being reissued in a fully revised and redesigned 8th edition. The authors trace the technological advances through the century, in addition to providing the latest information on new and planned equipment from the international manufacturers. The most comprehensive volume available.

Regiments and Corps of the British Army

—Ian S Hallows—

In one single source reference, the regimental structure and traditions of the British Army are examined in detail, including all amalgamations and disbandments together with a guide to battle honours, campaigns, music and headquarters.

Last Stand! Famous Battles Against the Odds

—Bryan Perrett—

Famous Last Stands like The Alamo, Little Big Horn and Arnhem will almost certainly never be seen again in this day and age of high powered technology and weaponry. However in this volume, the author takes the reader through thirteen conflicts from the Napoleonic campaigns to World War Two, illustrating the bravery and often foolhardiness of this military trait where the few stand out against the many.

Cooking pot dates back to Crimea

AN object in a photograph in your focus on 32 Field Hospital (March 18) was described as a 1938-issue cooking pot.

It has a far more ancient lineage. As I recall it is known as a Soyer stove or cooker after the French chef Alexis Soyer who, at his own expense, went to the Crimea in 1855 to advise on cooking for the army and the military hospitals.

The National Army Museum is far better qualified to confirm this. Its snack bar is named after him. — K G Whyte, 27 Victoria Road, Chichester, W Sussex PO19 4HY.

Let's sort out the brassards

AS a student of military history, I have been interested to note the proliferation of unofficial or semi-official badges worn by individual units in the Gulf (one example was the Black Adder of HQ Force Maintenance Area) in addition to the "desert rat" formation badge.

Since my information on these badges is fragmentary, I contacted PS 12, the MoD branch which sponsors Army uniform regulations, only to be greeted with words to this effect:

"We don't know about these things. We don't want to know about these things. They're all unofficial, or at best semi-official. If we accepted them as official, we'd have to re-write the book. They will not be worn when the units return to the UK."

OK. Fine. But it seems to me they have been vital to unit morale, and are part of military history. I would like to document them, and thereby perhaps prevent Gulf veterans from arguing over their beer from now to the middle of the

Here's one: 28 Sqn GTR's badge

21st century over who wore what. I am therefore writing to you, and to all units involved in the Gulf which I can trace, with a view to cataloguing the badges.

All that I need is a sketch of a typical brassard, outlining the badge designs and indicating colours, for all the badges worn together in this way for each unit. A colour photo, or an example of the badge, would be nice but is not essential.

Information on uniform details would also be helpful, as press photos seem to show a heterogeneous assortment of desert and European camouflage patterns worn together. — D C Blevin, MoD, AG Sec 2h, Room 810, Empress State Building, London SW6 1TR.

We're the King's Hussars

AS an avid reader of SOLDIER I was aghast to see my husband's regiment wrongly named in the story headlined "Awesome" (March 18).

We are not the 14th/20th Royal Hussars, but the 14th/20th King's Hussars.

Thank you so much for your coverage of Op Granby. I'm looking forward to more in future issues. — Mrs J Scott, c/o Sgt R W Scott, C Sqn, 14/20 H, BFPO 45.

● Apologies to 14/20 H. The story was written and faxed in great haste from Kuwait City and the error slipped through. — Editor

Euphoria . . . or whitewash?

CAN someone please tell an old soldier just what the euphoria following the Gulf "disaster" is all about?

Having served as a staff officer during the Second World War in such theatres as France (1939-40) and with the 1st and 8th Armies from 1942 to 1945, I am perplexed.

I was trained that a war has not been concluded nor won until it reaches its uttermost and final cessation. As with Adolf Hitler, this final conclusion comes only with the destruction and/or bringing to justice of the perpetrators, in this case Saddam Hussein and his fellow criminals.

We have not done this and, therefore, we have an inconclusive state of affairs in which already Hussein is venting his wrath on his own people by acts of repression.

What's the betting that he will retrieve the arms lodged in Iran and start again, possibly against Saudi Arabia or Israel?

Listening to the old League of Nations in the late 30s contributed to the Second World War; just watch that listening to the United Nations in 1991 does not finally spark off the Third World War due to the inconclusive result of Desert Storm.

Euphoria or another whitewash? — Col (Retd) T Laird, Largs, Ayrshire.

Compass: The first major victory

"FOX killed in Open." Thus General Sir Richard O'Connor, Commander XIII Corps, informed General Sir Archibald Wavell, C-in-C Middle East, from Cyrenaica on February 8, 1941 of the overwhelming defeat of the Italian Army in just two months, resulting in their loss of 200,000 troops killed, wounded and taken prisoner.

The latter category amounted to over 120,000, including 22 generals and one admiral, which caused an Australian soldier who was rounding some of them up at Bardia to comment: "I joined the army because I was tired of my old job, but here I am bloody well droving again."

This proved to be the first major British victory of the war. Operation Compass started on December 12, 1940 at Sidi Barrani only as a raid against the Italian Army which had crossed into Egypt in September shortly after Italy had declared war on June 11, 1940.

Although the operation was primarily a land operation, George Forty is careful to pay due credit in The First Victory to the RN and RAF, without whose help in keeping open the supply route through the Mediterranean, providing sea and air power against the enemy, supplying troops by sea and air and in evacuating prisoners of war, the campaign would not have succeeded.

The RN destruction of the Italian Fleet at Taranto by Swordfish torpedo aircraft in November was a vital overture to Operation Compass.

Nor would it have succeeded without the relentless drive of O'Connor. He wrote to the GOC 7 Armoured Division about January 27, 1941: "You say that the Armoured Division will be played out after reaching Mechili. I am afraid I cannot agree. They will only be 'played out' when there are no more tanks that can move. It is no good failing in the object of our campaign with a reserve of tanks in hand."

They went on a further 150 miles to El Agheila, cutting off the retreating Italians, who were so unprepared that the leading vehicle contained civilians, and completing their destruction.

O'Connor requested permission to continue against the demoralised Italians to capture Tripoli but was denied because Wavell had been ordered by Churchill to send troops to Greece against a possible German intervention.

Had O'Connor captured Tripoli before the first German troops, sent to bolster the Italians, arrived there on February 12, would that have been the end of the North

Another time, another war

Half a century separates these two pictures – but little seems to have changed. In the top picture an RAF unit refuels British Army tanks in the front line of the battle for Sidi Barrani. On the left, and 50 years later, a Challenger main battle tank is refuelled in northern Saudi Arabia before the ground offensive to liberate Kuwait.

African campaign and would the battles of Tobruk and Alamein never have happened?

Colonel General Alfred Jode had the last word: "Germany lost the war because she had been obliged to divert divisions to meet the British landings in Greece. This meant she lost six weeks. She lost time and with time she lost Moscow, Stalin-grad and the war." So Churchill was right!

George Forty has told the story of what Sir Basil Lidell Hart called "one of the most daring ventures and breathless races in the annals of the British Army" with loving care, much attention to detail, marvellous photographs – over 300 – and great humour.

If a copy had been available in the Gulf, tank and infantry commanders might have picked up some useful tips. – PSN

"Britain's leading supplier of kit to the professionals"

SILVERMAN'S

NEW BERGEN PLCE Nato Ref No: 8465-99-978-5360/62

- Main body available in two sizes – long or short for optimum fit, both have the same capacity. Both models include a light aluminium alloy frame built into internal pockets of the rucksack. The frame moulds to the individual's body shape for increased comfort, and can be used with belt kit.
- An integral harness gives support over the shoulders, and is adjusted by buckles and straps attached to the rucksack base. The buckles are quick release allowing for quick discarding in an emergency. An adjustable padded belt gives extra security.
- The main rucksack body carries a separate pocket at the front, an external pocket on the main lid as well as a map and document pocket built into the inside of the lid. There are straps on the side for skis, a carrying handle at the top, and various load carrying points on the lid, sides and base as an aid when parachuting, and to secure such items as a sleeping bag by means of the utility straps. The lid is elasticated and has a shroud to prevent ingress of water. The main fabric is textured nylon coated with light polyurethane in olive drab. Capacity 120 litres approx.
- The two side pouches are attached to the main body by heavy duty zips, and can be used singly or zipped together to form a small day patrol pack equivalent. For this mode of use a separate lightweight adjustable yoke is provided.
- Lifetime guarantee Price £125.00 + £2.25 p&p

Army sting drawn by Somerset

Army 1, Somerset and Avon 1

A DRAW against Group A leaders Somerset and Avon effectively ended the Army's interest in this year's South West Counties championship, writes Pat Massey.

On reflection it was about as much as the Army, ravaged by injury and non-availability, deserved.

Playing in the teeth of a strong wind sweeping across Aldershot Military Stadium, the Army did well to restrict their visitors to a handful of chances in the first half.

The Army took the lead in the 58th minute when the third in a series of corners was fired hard and low across the county goal. LCpl Alan Robinson (R signals) tapped in from close range.

Minutes later Somerset were back on level terms when 'keeper Sgt Nigel Wiscombe was beaten by a header.

Scottish Div Depot 2, 2 Inf Div Regt RCT 0

Glencorse-based Scottish Div Depot successfully defended their Army (UK) Minor Units title with a 2-0 victory over 2nd Infantry Div Regt RCT and so retain the Yorks and Lancs Cup, this year sponsored by Leyland Daf.

The Jocks failed to exploit their territorial domination in the first half and had to wait for 30 minutes before getting a real shot on target. They went ahead when a defender headed into his own goal.

LIGHTLY LADS!

THE lads of the Light Division Depot are the new Army junior football champions.

They won the Under 17½ Cup by beating Junior Leaders RA from Bramcote 3-0 at Tidworth. The Winchester boys wasted five good chances before JLdr John Davies (RGJ) put the Light Division ahead with a neat chip.

Two minutes from half time Scottish pressure was rewarded with one of the sweetest goals seen at Aldershot Military

RAF victory

AS SOLDIER went to press the Royal Air Force beat the Army 1-0 at Uxbridge in the Inter-Services championship. There will be a full report in the next issue Stadium for a long time. Cpl "TJ" McIntyre (QO Hldrs) squared the ball from midfield to Cpl Andy Lundie (A and SH) on the right. His perfect cross dropped on to the forehead of Sgt Graham Reid (A and SH) and the ball was thundered into the net.

Depot 'keeper Cpl Dougie Graham (BW) enlived the second half. On one occasion he went walkabout on the edge of a packed penalty area, was left stranded, and had to thank his defence for rescuing the situation.

Later he brought down a ruck of players in a situation offering little danger, then made amends by blocking the resultant penalty and brilliantly saving the point-blank rebound.

Soon afterwards he made two more terrific saves.

The Jocks now travel to Rheindahlen on April 20 for the Army Minor Units Challenge Cup final against BAOR opponents not yet decided.

After the break the Light Division were much more commanding and JLdr Les Henderson (LI) scored twice more. Key to victory was the constructive midfield work of skipper JCpl David Coffey (who was voted man of the match), JLdr David Ross and JLdr Trevor Wood, all of the Light Infantry.

TOUGH GOING

ENGLAND representatives Cpl Neil McCallum and Sgt Dave Abbott were the only Army boxers to get past the tough Combined Services-Western Counties England ABA quarter-final round at Salisbury on March 16, writes John Elliott.

Their next appearance was in the George Wimpey All-England semi-finals at Aston Villa Leisure Centre, Birmingham on April 3. Also in action there were Royal Marines Trevor French and Mark Edwards, the former ABA champion.

Grenadier Guardsman Abbott, who got a second chance in the competition when RAF novice SAC Paul Fiske - winner of the Services title on a walkover - withdrew, was himself the recipient of a walkover when Western Counties could not come up with a super heavyweight.

McCallum (10 Corps Tpt Regt RCT) comfortably beat

Torbay's George Nicette, but had to settle for a majority points decision - a graphic illustration of how hard it is to win away from home in the ABA competition when two of the three judges are from the opposition camp.

In different circumstances LCpl Joe Rajcoomar (1 DERR) and LCpl Kevin Mason (Depot and Tg Regt RCT) might also have won.

Mason was stopped automatically in the third when a fourth compulsory count was given against him. Yet twice he was blatantly pushed through the ropes and Empire's Adrian Stone was repeatedly guilty of holding and hitting.

The Army camp felt Mason won the second round and was well ahead in the third when the bout was brought to a premature end.

And Rajcoomar, after losing the first round, did more than enough to win the second against Devonport veteran Arthur Jones, and did everything but stop his opponent in a thrilling if one-sided final round. Jones got the judges' verdict - unanimously.

Fus Danny Greenslade (1 RWF), making his debut at this level, took the first round against John Hitchings but could not stay with the pace when the Poole flyweight turned up the pressure.

LCpl Lee Innes (1/3 Tg Regts RE) lost a unanimous decision to Paignton's Peter Norris. Innes was well below par on the night and his defeat was a big disappointment.

Two young Army boxers are through to the NABC quarter-finals at Milton Keynes on April 6.

Pte Loz Roach (1 LI) and Pte Darren Duggan (R Hamps) both beat highly rated opposition at Harrow in the regional finals to make progress in the competition. Pte Sven Hamer (1 Queens) lost on points.

Women, U-21s retain titles

ALTHOUGH a weakened Army men's senior team were beaten by both Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force, the eventual champions, in the Inter-Service basketball championships at RAF West Drayton, there were notable successes for the Army Under 21 and women's teams.

The U-21s beat the Navy 72-48 and the airmen 69-58 to retain their title, while the Army women, ably guided by coach Maj (Retd) George Kimpton, were always in control against the WRAF to win 59-43.

The men's team went down 76-109 to the Navy, the defending champions, and lost 67-89 to the RAF after a brave fight to level the scores at 34-34. The Navy, unexpectedly, lost their form in the final and were well beaten by the airmen.

A fortnight earlier at Bradbury Barracks, Krefeld, 16 Signal Regiment successfully defended their Army Major Units title in beating UKLF champions 1 and 3 Training Regiments RE 84-69.

The chefs from Training Centre ACC at Aldershot regained the Minor Units championship with a 74-54 win over a battling Dusseldorf Station.

ASPT Aldershot hosted the Army junior basketball championships, with Junior Leaders Regiment RE from Dover proving too strong for the rest in the under-17½ competition. Junior Leaders RA were runners up.

It was a fitting climax to the Army basketball career of the young sappers' coach, Maj (Retd) Alan Soulsby, who is retiring after 30 years involvement in the sport at all levels.

In the youth competition (over-17½), Army Apprentice College RE, Chepstow, retained their title when they edged out Princess Marina College.

So close for RCZ, 4 Div

THE BAOR inter-Divisional badminton competition at Bielefeld ended in a photo-finish, with the three teams apparently level. The final result had to be calculated on sets won, which produced a tie between 4 Div and Rear Combat Zone on 30 sets each with 3 Div, the defending champions, third on 27 sets.

Because of Operation Granby only 3 and 4 Divs and RCZ took part.

BAOR badminton champions 35 Engineer Regiment won the inter-unit final for the third consecutive year when they beat 13 Signal Regiment in an exciting final.

LCpl Batty of 13 Signals beat sapper No 1 Cpl Gibb to level the final at 4-4 before Cpl McMillan clinched the trophy for the engineers with a win over Sig Merchant.

In the semi-finals 13 Signals beat 21 Signals and 35 Engr Regt beat 3 Regt AAC.

HUGH SETS PACE

THE 1991 British Services international Alpine ski championships at Megeve, France went ahead despite the Gulf war. Although the number of racers was down on previous years, the event - sponsored by Portakabin and Courage - was blessed by ideal conditions and an abundance of snow.

The French Army were quickest on the giant slalom with Spain taking their first ever medal to finish second. In the British Inter-Services competition the Army won both men's and women's team awards despite Lt Hugh Hutchison RE and Lt Tana McQuoid WRAC, the defending champions, being outtraced by the RAF's Craig Bonnington and Jenny Davidson.

Davidson and McQuoid were first and second in the women's special slalom, with the RAF taking team honours.

Four French Air Force skiers finished in the top five in the men's downhill, set over a course of Europa Cup standard. The Army's LCpl Geordie Crawford (22 Signal Regiment) lived up to pre-race predictions to win his first Inter-Service title, with Hugh Hutchison (35 Engineer Regiment) second.

The inaugural Super G was set on the L'Etret piste, a real test of nerve, ability and stamina. Tana McQuoid (1 RGJ) finished half a second behind Jenny Davidson and the RAF went on to win the Inter-Services title.

Frenchman Samuel Tissot took the honours in the men's Super G, but Hugh Hutchison improved to win the Services' individual title ahead of Bonnington, so leading the Army to the new Hollands title, with Hutchison (35 Engineer Regiment) second.

Hutchison also won the special slalom and the Ski Challenge Cup, and the British Inter-Services team championship trophy once again went to the Army.

Hutchison was also awarded the Duchess of York Trophy for the best male Commonwealth skier.

LCpl Steven Bartliff (left) makes flying use of an overlap to score the Army try. He kicked ahead and beat the Navy defence to the ball

BATTLE ROYAL

Thin red line denies spirited Navy challenge

WHEN Saddam Hussein predicted the Mother of all Battles, he probably was not thinking of Twickenham as the venue, writes John Quin.

However, that's what the large crowd at the 1991 Army-Royal Navy game saw. And in the final attack, the Army made sure of a fourth victory in a row in the opener for this year's Inter-Service championship, and in doing so retained the Willis Trophy.

They won by ten points (two penalties and a try) to nil.

When the final whistle blew, the Army boys sank onto the hallowed turf in a mixture of elation, exhaustion and relief.

It had been a battle royal, not by any stretch of the imagination a game of flowing exhibition-type rugby, but nevertheless full of commitment and raw-blooded exchanges, which only twice appeared to spill over into the unacceptable.

The Navy badly wanted to win this one and their pre-match form was impressive.

They looked on paper, and then proved on the park, to be an all-round team, solid up front with experience in all the right places, a very lively back row and a speedy back division, which countered everything the men in red tried against them.

Skipper Deans claims the Willis Trophy

The Army paraded seven new caps on the day and the rest of the team leant towards youth, which augurs well for the future. Even the skipper gained his first cap in this confrontation, not an easy debut by any means.

Lt Andy Deans did everything demanded of him and led the side to a deserved victory.

But there were plenty of anxious moments for the red supporters. By half time five missed penalty attempts were all the Army had to show for soaking up some tremendous Navy pressure, and Lt Mike Walker's kicking form, which up to this game had been so good, had deserted him.

Army heads showed signs of drooping as each chance of an important lead slipped away.

The kickers were changed and gunner 2nd Lt Howard Graham struck two fine penalties to give the holders a chance. Still the Navy refused to lie down, and stormed the thin red line again and again.

The match had everything on the park – and the weatherman had his fun as well. We had, in the 80 minutes, sunshine and rain, calm and then fluctuating winds, torrential downpours and even thunder and lightning. Everything wanted to get in on the act.

As a good play finishes with a flourish that seals the plot, so did this game. From a Navy breakdown in midfield, the Army back row won the ball, spun it right to speedy "Scaleyback" LCpl Steven Bartliff, who, finding himself blocked in front, chipped beautifully on to the goal line and beat the Navy No 8 to the touchdown.

The kick failed, but the game was won and 31 very tired troopers went off to enjoy the night. The Army side had done the business. Now only the Royal Air Force, Rory Underwood and all, lie between them and the championship.

THE ARMY TEAM

- MADE FOR THE MOUNTAIN

In 1979 Berghaus introduced a revolutionary item of mountaineering equipment – the YETI GAITER. This new concept provided protection for the lower leg and the whole of the boot upper, virtually eliminating snow and water entry. The result was much warmer, drier feet – vital to the well-being and success of the climber. The YETI has since been so successful it is now established as an essential prerequisite for Scottish Winter, Alpine or Expedition mountaineering.

Alan Hinkes, currently Britain's most prolific mountaineer, testifies to the invaluable contribution the YETI has made to his achievements.

"Over the last 3 years I have climbed on the highest Himalayan peaks – the 8,000'ers. Climbing 2 new routes on Shisha Pangma (8046m), the first British ascent of Manaslu (8136m), the first ascent of Menlungtse (7013m) and, recently, two 8,000m peaks in 12 days, Cho Oyu (8201m) and Shisha Pangma.

During this period I have chosen to use Berghaus equipment because it combines performance with reliability. I do not hesitate to recommend the YETI as one of the finest articles of equipment to be designed specifically for mountaineers. Having used them for over 10 years I fully appreciate their effectiveness and they will continue to remain a crucial element in all my mountaineering ventures."
