The smoke gets in your eyes!

"Ciggies" are poison and spell ruin for rifle shots. Much of the British Army's mediocre rifle shooting derives from this. Nothing (apart from hard drugs) undermines the nervous system, steadiness of hand, muscle control, and focusing so relentlessly.

I have done bags of variegated shooting and can swear to this. But, while a soldier, I fell into the disgusting habit of smoking and all my shooting skills went to "pot".

Yet in the desert we used to see Monty dishing out fags and, at the same time, rabbiting on against alcohol. Actually a tot of liquor before a shoot often does you good – relaxes you and liberates you from excessive seriousness. Now where did I put that ashtray? – R J C Holmes, Flat 19, Haldane Court, Osborne Road, Jesmond, Newcastle upon Tyne.

Boot built to perform

Your anonymous correspondent in SOLDIER (May 16) on the subject of the Boot Combat High is clearly unaware of modern boot design when he claims that soldiers today do not lace up their boots properly. Indeed, if he were to examine the many advertisements carried by your own magazine for commercially available boots, he would see that the geometry is now very different from old-style boots.

The Infantry Trials and Development Unit has carried out a number of intensive trials on the Boot Combat High Mark II and the colour sergeant (photographed at the Chelsea Barracks demonstration) was wearing them as they were designed to be worn.

However, it has to be appreciated that the fact that the two top edges of the uppers do not meet and consequently the sewn-in tongue is exposed does not imply that the boots are not fitting tightly.

Indeed the only way to close the lace holes would be for the wearer to select over-wide boots and this could lead to discomfort to the wearer and damage to the boot in the long term.

The zip insert referred to by your correspondent, like any other privately purchased equipment, does not have official approval, nor is it necessary. He should appreciate that military combat clothing and equipment is developed for high performance rather than appearance.

Of course for ceremonial use, troops of the Household Division still wear old style ankle boots, not BCH, and these can be laced up to close the gap for the sake of appearance.

All your military readers will know the problems of the Mark I and will be glad to hear that the unanimous verdict of ITDU is that the Mk II boot we have on trial is a vast improvement on anything we have ever had before. – Lt Col N S Hunter, Queens, Infantry Trials and Development Unit, The School of Infantry, Warminster, Wilts BA12 0DJ.

Tank swaps in pipeline

I was very pleased to see my letter regarding the Josef Stalin tank in SOLDIER (May 16).

I was also pleased to see the report on the Priest and Ram delivered from Germany to the Tank Museum at Bovington, Dorset. Your continued coverage of the museum is much appreciated, and there are some interesting swaps in the pipeline even if not with the Soviet Union. – Peter Brown, Society of Friends of the Tank Museum, 10 Langley Avenue, Somercotes, Derbyshire DE55 4LT.

PRIZE BONUS

It's first prize to the Army and runners-up prizes to civilians in SOLDIER's first three-prize HOAY competition (No 438). The £50 first prize goes to Pte Bailey of A/Tk Pl, Sp Coy, IRRW, BFPO 41.

Newly-introduced runners-up prizes of books go to Miss L Coates of Octavian Way, Brackley, Northants, and Mr C J Reeder, of Broome, Bungay, Suffolk. There are more prizes to be won in this issue's competition on Page 43.

Where to go for advice

It is respectfully suggested that the answer to WO1 Carr (SOLDIER, May 2) will be found in the four page SOLDIER Special Supplement which accompanied SOLDIER May 30, in which it will be noted that serving personnel are catered for by their respective regimental paymasters, which has nothing to do with the DHSS who cater for the civilian population of this country.

To use WO1 Carr's own words it is a question of "they" and "us", for two distinct and separate bodies are concerned.

If, however, information is needed regarding the civilian population I would strongly recommend the purchase of a booklet entitled Guide to the Social Services published by the Family Welfare Association annually at Denison House, 296 Vauxhall Bridge Road, London, SW1 - Capt Henry W Corke, 249 Marlborough Road, Gillingham, Kent ME7 5HS.

East Surrey POW was militiaman

I was interested to read Mrs Hulin's letter, in SOLDIER (May 2), and your reply.

The question, that comes to mind is how the late Mr Hulin came to be taken prisoner-of-war if he was at the time serving in the 3rd Bn, The East Surrey Regiment, as it was a militia battalion which served in the Dover Garrison throughout the First World War. One assumes he was posted or volunteered for service with a front line battalion.

Your reply is not directly correct, in that as a militia battalion the 3rd East Surreys was not reconstituted after the war, and was formally disbanded along with 86 other militia battalions by Army Order 47 of April 1953.

In the review of the book The Three Star Blitz by Charles Whiting, which appeared in SOLDIER (May 2), the reviewer implies that deliberate attacks on civilians and civilian property are "now universally acknowledged as a legitimate tool of offence". He also writes that "hardly a hair is turned by such horrors as the war of the cities in the prolonged Iraq-Iran conflict".

Fortunately, at least from an international legal point of view, the reviewer is wrong on both counts.

HOME, AGAIN!

Your article in SOLDIER, May 16 says "The Cheshires (22nd Regiment) have arrived back in Chester where in 1689 they were raised as a regiment for service in Ireland. They have not been back since."

The 1st Battalion The Cheshire Regiment was stationed at Chester from September 1873 until July 1874. - James Peter Brooks, 310 Lewis Trust Estate, Ixworth Place, Chelsea, London.

An excellent two volume work entitled Lineage Book of British Land Forces, 1660-1978 by the Rev J B M Frederick, published by Microform Academic Publishers, Wakefield would be of interest to anyone concerned with the titles, lineage and reorganisations of the Army. - Kenneth W S Goodson, 16 Almond Crescent, Swanpool, Lincoln LN6 0HN.

● Other letters on the same subject have been received from H R Miller (ex 6 Bn East Surrey Regt), 67 Potters Grove, New Malden, Surrey; Edward A G Croucher of Fen Cottage, South Lopham, Diss, Norfolk; and Maj J P Riley, 1st Bn The Queen's Regiment, Mooltan Barracks, Tidworth, Hants.

War and the civilian

There has long been a prohibition in the law of war on attacks against the civilian population. This customary international law is reaffirmed in the 1977 First Protocol additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949. The same applies to deliberate attacks on civilian property, the prohibition on which the 1977 First Protocol also reaffirms.

During the South Atlantic Conflict both the United Kingdom and Argentina took care to respect the prohibition of attacks upon civilians, and the requirement to distinguish between military and civilian targets.

Referring to the "war of the cities", both the United Nations Security Council and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) have issued public statements requesting both Iran and Iraq to cease military operations against civilian targets. - Michael A Meyer, Head, Legal and Committee Services Department, British Red Cross, 9 Grosvenor Crescent London SW1X 7EJ.

Suspended Cameronians

With reference to your item on Glencorse and the seven regiments in the Scottish Division (SOLDIER, May 16), you included my old regiment The Cameronians (Scottish Rifles).

Alas, how I wish that was true. The regiment was placed in "suspended animation", a phase dreamt up by some Whitehall paper tiger no doubt. - R Cowgill, ex Sgt, 9th Bn, The Cameronians (Scottish Rifles), Witherage Wood Lodge, Beaconsfield, Bucks.

4 R Irish celebrate their coming of age

SPECIAL arrangements were made for as many former officers, soldiers and their families as possible to attend when the 4th Battalion The Royal Irish Rangers (the North Irish Militia) celebrated its 21st birthday by trooping the regimental Colour at Redford Barracks, Edinburgh.

The battalion was formed in 1967 from three former TA infantry battalions in the province, the 5th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, the 6th Royal Ulster Rifles and the 5th Royal Irish Fusiliers. A further company was formed from the London Irish Rifles (TA).

The Colour, which has not been trooped since 1972, was trooped to music provided by the battalion's bugles, pipes and drums, accompanied by the Northern Ireland TA Staff Band, with the soldiers on parade wearing their traditional caubeen bonnet and hackle.

The cloaks and saffron kilts of the pipers, the green, black and silver uniforms of the buglers, drummers and bandsmen, and the khaki jackets and green trousers of the men on the birthday parade made the occasion a particularly colourful event.

Colour trooped in Berlin

THOUSANDS of spectators turned out at the 1936 Berlin Olympic Stadium to see the Princess Royal take the salute at the Queen's Birthday Parade and traditional Trooping the Colour, this year by the 1st Battalion, The King's Own Scottish Borderers.

A total of 730 troops were on parade. On foot were men of the 1st Battalion, The King's Regiment; the 1st Battalion, The King's Own Scottish Borderers and the 1st Battalion, The Black Watch.

Following were 14 Chieftains of the 14th/20th King's Hussars, 16 FV 432 APCs, 12 Fox ARVs and 49 Land Rovers. The tanks and APCs bore the unique black and white chequerboard camouflage devised by the British in Berlin, and highly effective in urban surroundings.

On her arrival at RAF Gatow the Princess Royal inspected a guard of honour formed by men of C Sqn, 14/20 H; 3 Sqn 13 Signal Regiment; and the Berlin HQ and Sigs Regt, drawn up under the command of Maj Stephen Andrews, OC 3 Sqn. The Princess Royal is Colonel in Chief of both 14/20 H and the Royal Signals. The welcoming line included the British Military Commander, Maj Gen Patrick Brooking, and Mrs Brooking.

After the salute, the Princess inspected the troops from the back of an open vehicle.

Flying off to a new life is this Saladin, one of two belonging to B Sqn 17/21 Lancers, based in Cyprus. The 1950s armoured cars have been cannibalised of their useful parts and now have a new career as hard targets on the island. Lift off was by courtesy of a Chinook from 7 Sqn, RAF Odiham

A fly past included three Gazelle helicopters of 7 Flight AAC. Before leaving the Princess Royal asked Gen Brooking to pass on to the troops her appreciation of their smart turn out. She said she would make the Queen aware of how well the occasion had gone.

TA forms new EOD regiment

A NEW Royal Engineers bomb disposal regiment, 101 (London) Engineer Regiment (EOD) (V), has been formed from the four Territorial Army squadrons which were part of 33 Engr Regt (EOD) based in the Medway towns, Dartford and Brighton.

The old 101 (London) Regiment was disbanded in 1967, and was one of the few volunteer units to serve in the Egyptian and South African wars, during 1882 and 1889. The name was resurrected in recognition of the work carried out by sapper bomb disposal units in London during the Second World War. Maj Gen Peter Campbell was the inspecting officer at the formation parade.

Army numbers down by 1,600

REGULAR Forces manpower stood at 316,985 at the end of March, which was 3,000 lower than the beginning of the year. Army figures were down by 1,600 according to MoD statistics.

Officers numbers generally were up marginally with a small reduction in males affecting all Services except the Royal Marines, and offset by increases in females in the Army and the RAF.

Total officer outflow rose by 110 compared with 1986/87, but there were slight decreases for the Army. Army manpower at the end of the financial year was 158,105.

Accident deaths up

ALREADY this year more people in the Army have died in road traffic accidents than for the whole of 1986/87. Worldwide Army statistics reveal there were 34 road accident fatalities in the year ending March 1987, the lowest on record.

But the latest figures show 57 deaths between April and October, of which 24 were in UKLF in privately-owned vehicles.

There was an overall increase of seven per cent in accidents representing an additional 649 for all types of vehicles. Casualty figures were down by eight per cent, but the accident rate per 100,000 miles has risen slightly over five years. The number where the Army Department driver was to blame has stayed almost constant over the three years records have been kept.

The number of accidents has risen from 7,588 in 1982/83 to 10,334 in 1986/87. There has been a drop in injury costs in both Army and private vehicles, probably reflecting the compulsory wearing of seat belts rather than improved driving, says the annual report on road safety in the Army by the Director General of Transport and Movements, Maj Gen David Colley.

Royal visit for R Hamps

THE Princess of Wales, who is Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Hampshire Regiment, visited the Regimental Headquarters at Searle's House, Winchester.

Sappers pave the way to Turtle Bay

CYPRUS has been invaded – but this seaborne assault was a welcome one. In mid May every year turtles swim inland to lay their eggs in the sands at Turtle Bay, part of a conservation area.

These annual Chelonian visitors attract thousands of tourists and naturalists who now have a lot to thank the British sapper for.

Turtle Bay is an unspoiled beauty spot and its original, pot-holed track was a motorists' nightmare. But now, thanks to a military and civil project, there is an excellent road for the seasonal pilgrimage.

62 (Cyprus) Support Squadron RE has been improving the 13-mile road from Ayios Yeoryios to Invicta Camp, a field fire range used by UK units for training.

Capt Mark Cox, Plant Troop commander, said: "The original track has disintegrated, and you couldn't get logistic vehicles in. We've been upgrading and restoring it, using materials quarried locally."

He said the benefits were double-edged. "The government would have to spend the money on training anyway. The men are doing their training and getting a job done that is of immense benefit to the community. It also engenders a lot of goodwill, which we need to maintain the training ground."

The roadworks were certainly no soft option. It meant a 70-hour week with most soldiers simply "crashing out" when they got back to their temporary lodgings in a local hotel.

Medics do battle

MEN of the Colchester based 19 Field Ambulance RAMC have been undergoing a rigorous training schedule on Cyprus.

Exercise Lion Sun was designed to improve the vital life-saving capabilities of the medics as well as teaching them battlecraft. Lt Col Tony Willman, Commanding Officer, said: "Our medical technicians have to be trained to survive on a battlefield as soldiers as well as being able to carry out their own job as medics."

Battle of Normandy museum opened at Caen

DEFENCE Secretary George Younger was among international VIPS in Caen, France for the official opening of a new museum to commemorate the Battle of Normandy. His programme took him on a tour of the British D Day beachheads, including the Ouistreham and beach memorials, and the Orne river bridges.

He also met veterans from The Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, his own regiment, and the 51st Highland Division, who took part in the landings, before laying a wreath at Ranville war cemetery. Mr Younger is chairman of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission.

Massacre hero to get Royal citation

AN off duty soldier who had to dive for his life through a hedge when he came face to face with gunman Michael Ryan is one of eight heroes of the Hungerford massacre honoured by the Queen.

LCpl Carl Harries, 22, of the Royal Engineers, was visiting his parents in the town when Ryan, armed with a pistol, a Kalashnikov rifle and an M1 carbine, ran amok killing 15 people and wounding 31 others.

He followed Ryan as he shot wildly at anything in sight and tried to help one girl driver who had been hit. She was already dead. Then LCpl Harries warned oncoming motorists of the danger and helped another wounded driver. For 90 minutes he cradled the dying, comforted the wounded and covered those who were beyond help.

LCpl Harries's unit is 61 Field Support Squadron, RE at Maidstone, Kent.

During the inquest he was praised for trying to save the lives of four victims. He receives the Queen's Commendation for Bravery for giving emergency first aid.

LCpl Harries was delighted with the award, but also very surprised. "The Coroner commended me for my bravery and selflessness, saying I was a credit to myself and the corps I served in, and I really thought that was that," he said.

HSF prepares for Nijmegen

WHAT is claimed to be the first Home Service Force team to enter for the Nijmegen Marches is now in training.

Ten men from 15 (Badger) Platoon of E Company the 2nd Battalion The Wessex Regiment (V) have clocked up more than 2,500 miles in preparation.

Average age of the team is 45. The marches take place from July 19 to 22.

The Prince of Wales is pictured with soldiers of the 1st Battalion The Cheshire Regiment based at the new showpiece Dale Barracks in Chester. The Prince is their Colonel-in-Chief and it was his second visit since the battalion returned from Hong Kong in 1986. Prince Charles watched a communications training session, was briefed on the battalion, and met families of the battalion

Manx landings

THIRTY Territorial Army soldiers from the Bolton based battery of 103 Air Defence Regiment made a beach landing near Jurby on the Isle of Man to practise troop deployment in a rare joint exercise with part time sailors.

They arrived on the minesweeper HMS Ribble and, after defending an RAF bombing range from "attack", marched 19 miles to Douglas, from where they returned to the ship by inflatable dinghy.

Piked retreat

MEN of 9 Troop, 77 Armoured Engineer Squadron, 32 Armoured Engineer Regiment held the ground at the regiment's Beating Retreat in Dennis Barracks, Munsterlager, West Germany. The troop wore blues and carried pikes.

During their tour of BAOR the Band of the Corps of Royal Engineers, one of the senior staff bands in the British Army, played both in the Stadt Munster and at the Beating Retreat in the barracks.

Durham, many of them for his own regiment, the 15th/19th The King's Royal Hussars.

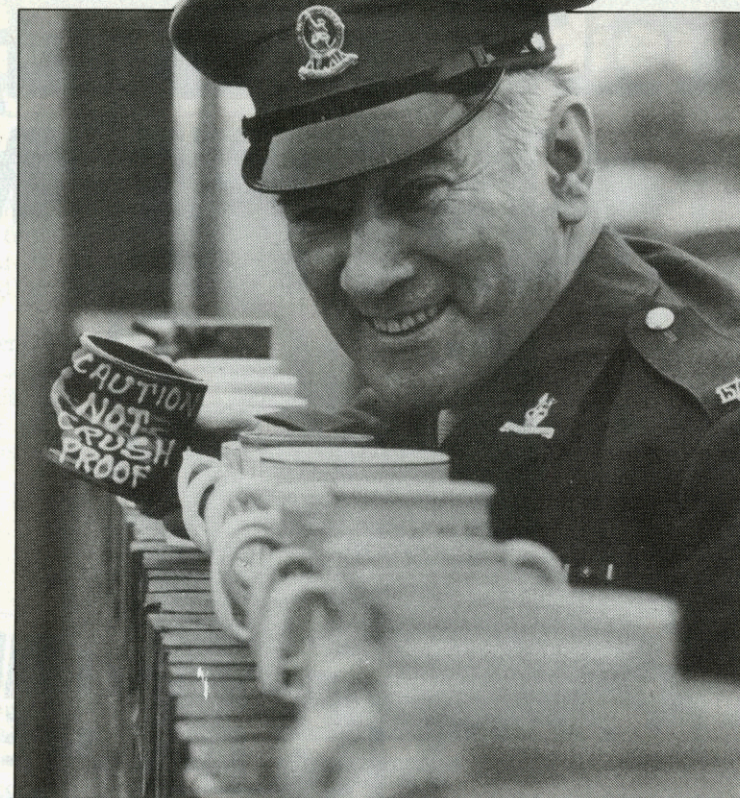

It happened like this. When his old friend Sgt Jack Flannigan (also 15/19 H) turned up to help one day he commented that Paddy always had the kettle on to give the applicants a cup of tea but that they broke quite a few mugs when they washed up.

"They ought to buy you a mug," said Flannigan. "Not more than 50p."

"So they should," said Fox. And so they did.

Now, after 37 years' service, much of it as a special recruiter, there are mugs everywhere, fine mugs, crude mugs, even rude mugs. All lined up on shelves.

"I always took two photos of the lads (or lasses) with their mugs," said Paddy. "One for my mug shot album ... and one for the recruit's mother so she would remember what her kid looked like on

All have gone into boxes now Paddy has retired and begun to look forward to the day ten years from now when he can enlist himself at Chelsea as an In-Pensioner.

PEOPLE

THE King's Own Royal Border Regiment has a new Last act

Colonel. Maj Gen David Miller relinquished his appointment as Colonel of the Regiment at a parade in Carlisle Castle during the annual regimental weekend in the town. New Colonel of the Regiment is Maj Gen Bob Hodges.

Gen Miller's final act was to present the BEM and the LS and GC medal to Col Sgt Paul Danson.

Horse Guards in bad way

Behind the impressive facade of Horse Guards in London's Whitehall all is not well.

Little do the tens of thousands of tourists who rubberneck there every year at the splendidly attired guardsmen and their elegant mounts, or the hordes of commuters who scurry past on their way to the office realise that Horse Guards is in a sad state of decay. In fact, one end of the building is nearly falling down.

But help is on the way. The rambling building from where Maj Gen Christopher Airy commands both London District and the Household Division in a room used by the royal family to watch the annual Trooping the Colour ceremony, is to be completely renovated inside and out.

The cost of the work, which will not start until after the Trooping the Colour parade next year, will run into millions of pounds, paid for by English Heritage – the building is listed – and the Ministry of Defence.

Now it's the best!

A junior ranks club once officially described as "one of the worst in the UK" has just been renovated at a cost of £21,000.

The JRC at Waterbeach, Cambridge, now presumably one of the best in the country, was transformed in a joint operation by 39 Engineer Regiment, Naafi and the PSA.

Naafi put up £7,000, Army and corps welfare funds stumped up £9,500 and the regiment agreed to find the balance.

Young off duty sappers at Waterbeach now have a social facility quite unrecognisable from the club officially described a year ago as one of the worst in the country.

Oxford plaque

A plaque has been unveiled at St Hugh's College, Oxford to commemorate the requisition of the college by the War Office during the Second World War.

It became the Military Hospital for Head Injuries from 1939 until 1945.

The plaque also commemorates Professor Sir Hugh Cairns who was in charge of the hospital, his staff, and the 13,000 patients treated there.

Two women judges are reported to have ruled that a Norwegian soldier could wear earrings on parade, contrary to military regulations. They said it would be sexual discrimination to order the private to take off the earrings. A male judge disagreed!

SOLDIER to Soldier

Mr and Mrs Ian Hamilton with the plaque and Capt John Shipp's headstone

Tribute paid to Army's first vet

A war and weather battered headstone has been resited and dedicated in the grounds of the RAVC Support Group and HQ DAVRS in Aldershot. It was discovered in West Hackney Parish Church several years ago and marked the grave of Capt John Shipp (1763-1834), the first veterinary surgeon to join the British Army.

John Shipp joined the 11th Light Dragoons in June 1796 and served at the Battle of Bergen. He was present at Waterloo.

The headstone, badly damaged during the Second World War, was discovered through the efforts of Dr Ernest Gray, author of Shipp's biography, The Trumpet of Glory.

A plaque marking the occasion was unveiled by Mr Ian Hamilton, a nephew of Dr Gray.

In a second ceremony the headquarters building was named after Lt Gen Sir Frederick Fitzwygram who qualified as a vet in 1854 while serving in the 6th Dragoons. He became Inspector General of Cavalry and President of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, and was responsible for a number of reforms.

Views expressed in SOLDIER are not necessarily those of the Army or the Ministry of Defence.

Sapper Ian socks it to an octopus

DID you hear the one about the sapper and the octopus? No, neither had SOLDIER before meeting Spr Ian Grant, snorkeller extraordinaire!

Never one to waste his time in idleness, Spr Grant donned mask and flippers on arriving at Gibraltar and took to the murky waters around the Europa Point sewerage outlet.

Not the most obvious place to take a dip, but one that evidently had its attractions for 27-year-old Ian of Ripon based 15 Squadron, 38 Engineer Regiment.

Lo and behold, he found an octopus – but no ordinary octopus!

"They usually swim away when you try to grab hold of them but this one swung round and caught my arm.

"Quick as lightning it shot up my arm and wrapped a couple of tentacles round my neck so I started punching it to make it let go.

"I leapt out of the water with this thing hanging round my throat and eventually tore it off and killed it," said Spr Grant.

Undeterred by the experience, he returned to the water to earn himself celebrity status among local historians by discovering, nearby, a previously unrecorded naval gun barrel dumped unceremoniously off the edge of the cliff.

Leaving no stone unturned, he went on to find two hitherto unknown Sherman tanks of Second World War vintage on the sea bed before reluctantly handing back his flippers and returning to Yorkshire.

ROCK ON TOMMY!

Cpl Taff Boshein RE (above and left) shines up one of the dramatic rock formations deep inside Lower St Michael's Cave, popular with Army pot-holing enthusiasts

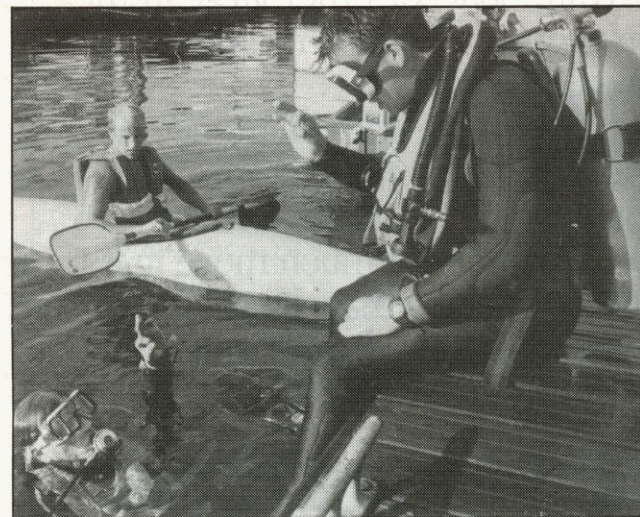

POPULARLY known as "beach bums", the instructors at the Gibraltar Adventurous Training Centre are quick to point out that their hours are longer than those of the rest of the battalion!

Drawn from the resident infantry battalion – currently 1 R Anglian – they volunteered for a two year stint at the centre while coming to the end of their tour in Northern Ireland . . . a decision they do not regret.

Gibraltar, they tell you, is a sportsman's paradise. It is ideal for all manner of disciplines, from pot-holing and climbing to sailing and diving.

Each of the 17 staff has his own speciality and passes on his skills to a mainly Army clientele, both Regular and TA, at the new centre built around a converted dry dock.

The waters of Gibraltar are teeming with wildlife and shipwrecks, making them ideal for sub-aqua diving, whereas the Rock itself is honeycombed with caves which make it a mecca for pot-holers.

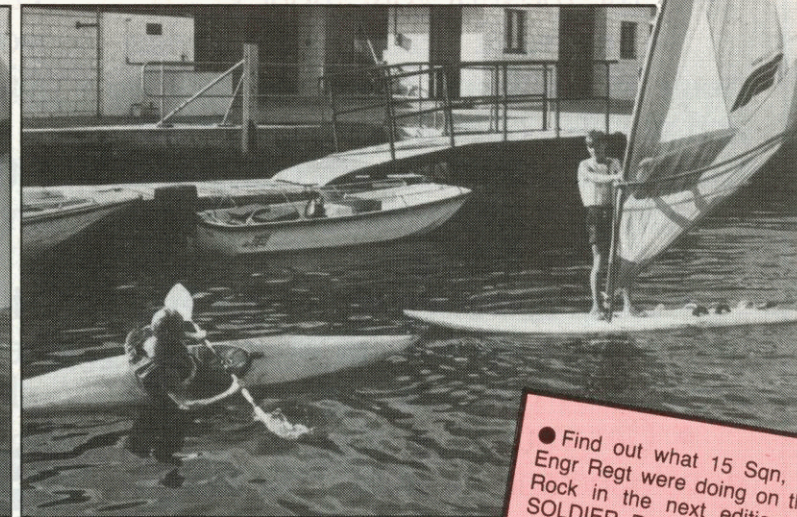

You name it, they'll arrange it! Men of 1 R Anglian teach various watersports at the GATC

A shark scare drove windsurfers into neighbouring safety boats but the monster turned out to be a harmless, plankton-eating basking shark.

Dolphins and turtles frequently accompany windsurfers and sailors offshore, and personalities such as Frank Bruno, Terry Marsh and Bob Geldof have accompanied Army pot-holers deep inside the Rock to see the dramatic underground rock formations. Trained to some extent before arriving at Gibraltar, the instructors are now experts in their fields.

Pte Joe Ward-Wilkinson said: "Gibraltar is marvellous for all manner of sports and especially for pot-holing. The Rock is riddled with cave systems and I have been down 48 of different sizes so far.

"It is like another world down there and it never fails to give me a buzz every time I take a party underground."

They may be working longer hours during the summer, but Gibraltar has its compensations.

● Find out what 15 Sqn, 38 Engr Regt were doing on the Rock in the next edition of SOLDIER. Read too about the work of other sappers on Gibraltar and what a two year posting holds in store for men of the 1st Bn, The Royal Anglian Regiment, the Royal Artillery Surveillance Detachment and 642 Signal Troop. We will also be featuring in a forthcoming issue the locally recruited Gibraltar Regiment who are about to celebrate their 50th anniversary

Brigadier among the Catterick babes . . .

THE picture right poses an obvious question: "Are you sitting comfortably?"

The man about to begin to read a story is Brig Alan Eastburn, joining in the spirit of the occasion after officially opening Playgroup North Catterick Garrison following its rescue and modernisation.

The playgroup was located in a group of buildings not maintained by the PSA. Cost of repairs was met by local funds after it was opened in 1974 but by the winter of 1986 it became obvious that major works were needed.

Roofs, toilet facilities and heating all required attention.

Work on one building was paid for out of garrison funds, and White Rose Community Centre and local Thrift Shop donations.

To complete the job and carry out repairs to a second building it was necessary to apply to Army Central Funds for a grant.

More than £9,000 was made available via the Services Sound and Vision Corporation.

The playgroup is now going as strong as ever catering for up to 100 children between two and a half and five years old who live in the north of the garrison which Brig Eastburn commands.

WELFARE WISE UP

A RESIDENTIAL course "Social Welfare of Servicemen and Families" will be held at Birmingham University from October 9 to 14.

It is excellent value for officers, SNCOs and wives who have responsibilities in personnel management and welfare. Food and accommodation are provided.

If you are interested ask for details from your Education Centre.

The Review Body on Armed Forces Pay, Seventeenth Report 1988, is available from HMSO, price £5.30. I hope it will become available in garrison libraries and that efforts will be made to publicise its whereabouts.

FALL IN FOR PLAY PARADE

IN THE long summer evenings and summer holidays ahead many children will make for play-grounds on married quarters estates, local authorities' grounds and seaside parks.

They ought to be able to find places which are stimulating but at the same time safe and attractive. Parents should be able to meet, and enjoy the time spent by the children at play.

Sadly such playgrounds are few. Many are sterile, bleak places with tarmac and concrete underfoot. It is estimated that there were 150,000 playground accidents last year.

One way parents can help to reduce this appalling figure is to check their local playground for potential dangers. They should be aware that no equipment should be more than eight feet high, they ought to look out for missing bolts, rust, rotten wood, jagged edges or gaps in platforms and sides.

The slide should be of one piece with no joins and should face away from the sun so that it does not get too hot. Handgrips and rails should be slim enough for a child to hold on to firmly and the guard rails should be vertical and solid so that children cannot climb up or over.

The biggest cause of playground injury is a serious fall - brain damage can result from a fall of less than a foot on to a hard surface such as concrete or tarmac.

Parents can press for safer, impact-absorbing surfaces and even raise the money to have it laid.

In a Which report, seven out of ten slides, climbing frames and swings which were inspected were mounted over unsuitable surfaces - grass, tarmac or concrete.

Even grass is unsuitable because it becomes slippery when wet, frozen in very cold weather, or baked hard in the heat.

Which also said that larger playgrounds had badly placed equipment and this can apply to new as well as old.

All playgrounds should have notices to tell you who is responsible for maintenance and they should be checked to see how often the maintenance is carried out. Parents too can help to keep down vandalism especially on playgrounds on estates.

Action ought to be taken if those responsible are caught.

One reason why complaints have been difficult to make is that parents have been unable to produce comprehensive reports on their playgrounds to show the authorities, detailing what is wrong, what needs repairing or even removing because it is dangerous.

Now checking has been made easy by the new publication Playing Safe.

It is a free checklist for assessing children's playgrounds and is produced by the National Playing Fields Association and the Consumers' Association.

All that is required for 90 per cent of the questions is a tick but there is also space for comment.

It also advises how to complain, who to go to and the right way to rectify problems.

Useful addresses complete this comprehensive and most useful checklist. A task which could be very useful to raise the standard of our married quarters playgrounds is for a volunteer parent to complete one check list for each playground throughout the UK and overseas.

We would then have a comprehensive and uniform assessment of our playgrounds.

Parents can request a follow up report. "No finance" will be given as a reason for some failures to carry out repairs but they should press for details of the maintenance contract and, if need be, perhaps raise money needed.

If parents are lucky enough to be due to have a refurbished playground then keep a watching brief.

Not long ago all the paths were relaid around a swing park on a married quarters estate but the broken, cracked and dangerous surface beneath the swings remained.

Where was that checklist? For FREE copies send an A4 size 20p stamped addressed envelope to: Playground Checklist, Consumers' Association, 2 Marylebone Road, London. NW1 4DX.

TRAVEL DEALS ON THE CARDS

'Contact' extends line that helps...

"CONTACT a Family", the national charity which aims at providing contacts between families whose children have special needs or similar disabilities has expanded a regional phone line to a national service.

This was decided after the completion of a successful pilot programme.

"Contact Line" is not a crisis or counselling service but a link-up facility for families, statutory and voluntary organisations.

Using computers it is establishing a bank of information covering local self-help groups, people suffering from rare forms of handicap, information on specific topics and fact sheets.

Trained volunteers will man the line which will be open from noon to 6 pm. The number is 01 (outside London) 222 2211.

The address: 16 Strutton Ground, London SW1P 2HP.

ONE or two items I have not yet reported from the Adjutant General's Conference will be of interest to readers, especially with the holiday season approaching.

I asked Major General Patrick Stone, the new Director of Personal Services whether travel concessions to and from Europe would be continued during the summer period. What had the outcome of discussions been?

There was some good news.

Maj Gen Stone: "The Army on behalf of the other Services have negotiated a travel card with the operator Sealink as part of the parcel of measures we are trying to put into place to make travel cheaper for Servicemen... I would be delighted if other offers were also forthcoming."

The present offer means a 15 per cent concession from UK to BAOR, 30 per cent from BAOR to UK and 25 per cent between Northern Ireland and the mainland.

Good news: concessions to remain

The card will be similar to the existing British Rail Card which it is hoped to continue.

On other points the situation was not so clear cut.

The Home Owners' package, which is nothing to do with the review on allowances, was a separate issue, said Maj Gen Stone.

He said there were never going to be any public funds for a savings scheme.

The Army agents, Naafi and other firms had been asked to look at alternatives.

The Home Owners' package would help second time buyers to move when posted, and would hopefully help with buying, letting and managing.

The Assisted House Purchase, Resettlement and 50 Plus Assisted House Purchase schemes have been available since September 30, 1984, but from October 1, 1988 the loan will be increased from £3,500 to £5,000 but the scheme will be phased out by autumn 1994.

This new scheme will alter many people's views on house purchase.

In future issues I will be looking at these schemes as well as the Boarding School Allowance which has now reverted to the concept for which it was originally intended.

The changes will make a difference to those seeking BSA for the first time and subsequent decisions will have to be made at posting time.

This subject I will also cover in future editions when the difficulties, if any, have been assessed by families.

Shirley's oak for old soldiers

THE grounds of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, did not escape from the effects of the great storm of last October.

A number of trees were destroyed and when she heard about it Shirley Gilberry, president of the Donnington Branch of the Guild of St Helena thought it would be a nice gesture to do something towards replacing them.

She got her wish and carried out a planting ceremony during the guild's 113th annual general meeting in London.

Shirley, who is blind, had the support of two Chelsea Pensioners and of the Governor of the Royal Hospital, Gen Sir Roland Guy, when she put in an oak, one of three saplings which represent the gratitude of all branches of the guild for the help they receive at Chelsea.

The guild has its headquarters in Chelsea.

Shirley herself lost her sight a few years ago after it was discovered she had diabetes.

She is a staunch campaigner on behalf of handicapped wives in the Army.

Sappers from 11 Field Squadron RE take a break from the mammoth task of preparing the Long Valley site for the exhibition

A JOINT force of sappers and civilians has been involved in the massive task of converting a large and barren piece of Hampshire countryside into a glittering, multi-million pound arms and armaments showcase, writes Laurie Manton.

When the curtain goes up on the biennial British Army Equipment Exhibition not even the next door neighbours could recognise Pegasus Village – or the barren stretch of nearby Long Valley which has been transformed into an impressive vehicle demonstration area.

Flattened, turfed and landscaped, Pegasus Village has become a fitting stage on which international military equipment transactions worth hundreds of millions of pounds can take place.

Drained and dug over, Long Valley's lunar landscape has been fitted with a large array of tank traps, ditches and other obstacles designed to show off vehicles at full stretch.

In charge of Pegasus Village and its 47 outside areas is Site Officer Lt Col Conrad de Planta RE, and his deputy Maj George Small, who between them have co-ordinated the operation to produce the showpiece arena.

Said Col de Planta: "The total area of Pegasus Village is about 37,000 square metres, of which some 25,000 are covered by a huge tent – that's roughly equivalent to four full-sized soccer pitches!"

The £2.4 million exhibition, organised by the MoD's Defence Export Services Organisation, will house more than 200 exhibitors representing 365 British firms, all eager to display their wares.

More than 25,000 visitors are expected to visit BAEE 88 including ministers, senior military staff, civil servants and industrialists from 86 different countries. It is not open to the public.

FAST TALKING GUYS!

THE air waves fairly rattled during Exercise OSEX 15 in Wales. Not only were up to 150 air strike sorties flown by jets each day, but Royal Signals communications teams were kept busy handling the large volume of signals traffic generated by the exercise, writes Laurie Manton.

The aim of the Offensive Support Exercise, sponsored by HQ 1 Gp RAF, was to practise the tasking of fast jets to support ground forces, and for the aircraft to practise supporting ground forces through forward air controllers.

This year's exercise took place in and around the Brecon Beacons with 244 Signal Squadron (Air Support) and three RAF detachments, providing comms support.

Maj Robert Symonds R Signals, in command of 244's crack communicators, said the exercise was very important from the squadron's point of view.

"If we get the communications wrong a lot of money is wasted as it is very expensive to put a jet up. There is no room for error."

Comms provided included a brigade headquarters forward to the target areas; comms to aircraft using VHF and, via radio, rebroadcast stations; safety comms to Sennybridge during live firing attacks; and access into the worldwide teleprinter networks at Brecon and Shrewsbury.

It was a lonely time for the FAC teams of

As the aircraft - Harriers, Tornados, Jaguars and American A-10s - approached the target they were talked in by the well hidden FACs.

The week before OSEX 15, Exercise Highland Cardinal was held in the same area to train FACs using fast jets on pre-planned tasks.

FRONTIER FORCE

THERE has always been a requirement in war for reconnaissance troops, a role traditionally performed by the cavalry – particularly the light cavalry.

It was their task to put a screen in front of the main forces to prevent enemy patrols from approaching, thus denying them information while penetrating their cavalry screen in order to obtain intelligence.

The day of the horse is long gone, but the recce role remains a vital one. Today it is regiments such as 1st The Queen's Dragoon Guards who carry out the task.

Based in Wolfenbittel, West Germany the QDG is an armoured reconnaissance regiment whose main task in time of conflict is to obtain quick and accurate information about enemy and terrain.

QDG is the senior of the 14 regiments that make up the Royal Armoured Corps and the man in charge is Lt Col Michael Boissard.

He told SOLDIER the regiment is able to send out patrols that have the ability, viewing devices and communications to enable them to pass information quickly from the "front of the front" back to the commanders who could then make an appreciation of what is happening and formulate their plans accordingly.

"It is not really part of a reconnaissance unit's job to get too involved in the main battle – the clash of battle groups, brigades and divisions – which is clearly a dangerous place to be! We are not equipped in the same way as tanks are to withstand that kind of fire, so we operate around the periphery of that clash and gather information," he said.

To suit them to their task, QDG is made up from specially selected soldiers trained to use their initiative and work on their own.

They normally operate in pairs of Scimitars with three men to a crew.

These highly trained teams work a long way from their senior commanders.

The fact that the regiment could be spread over a very large area, working in small groups and relying on each other to do their jobs properly, makes its operations very different to that of most battle groups where infantry companies and tank squadrons tend to work in concentrations under the watchful eye of their company commanders or squadron leaders.

"An infantry commander can probably see all the area covered by his company, a tank commander probably the same, whereas our squadron leaders work at a long distance, on the radio, from our troops who are doing the work.

"That's not to say our commanders don't go forward from time to time, but they have to be placed where they can best receive this information," said Col Boissard.

While his men prepare themselves for the day's action, Capt Alistair Roxburgh, troop leader of RHQ Troop, takes time out for a cuppa

THE VITAL LINK

CAPTAIN Alistair Roxburgh is the regimental signals officer and troop leader of RHQ Troop which communicates back to brigade and divisional headquarters. The troop is a vital link in the comms chain so necessary in action.

The troop is equipped with a number of vehicles including three Sultan armoured command vehicles, which carry the radios, and four Ferret scout cars.

The rank structure of the troop is somewhat unusual – it has a handful of indians and a lot of chiefs! Because of the importance of its role, it attracts the more experienced soldier. Often junior lance corporals can be found doing a trooper's job.

Said Capt Roxburgh: "Out of 22 men we only have three troopers. That's a lot of chiefs above them but it works out all right."

"We tend to pick the more mature and professional soldier who can get on with his job independently without being told what to do all the time."

Front is just down the road

1st The Queen's Dragoon Guards is the only British regiment based in Wolfenbuttel, a West German town designated as a posting for armoured reconnaissance regiments because, to quote the commanding officer: "Just down the road is likely to be the front of the front if anything goes badly wrong!"

Relations with the town are very good. The QDGs have been stationed in the town since last year, and get on very well with the townsfolk.

Said Lt Col Michael Boisard: "I think the advantages for a regiment like ours being in a station like this are worth mentioning."

"Although in some ways we would benefit from being in one of the big garrison towns we get much closer contact with our German allies here because we are on our own."

The fact that the regiment is stationed close to the Inner German Border tends to concentrate the soldiers' minds on the task in hand.

"We don't have to work very hard to explain to the men what we are here for. They know why, and it puts a lot of realism into all the training we have to do," he said.

A2 Echelon spares no effort...

EVERY mechanised regiment needs spares and repair support. Without it they could not operate at peak efficiency. In QDG, the A2 Echelon performs the vital job of keeping the regiment operating on top form.

Maj Mike Harris, in charge of A2 Echelon, said: "Our job is to supply, resupply and support the regiment through all phases of working in the field. We sit here like an enormous shop and the regiment just feeds off us."

Maj Mike Harris QDG, in charge of A2 Echelon – the repair and supply specialists

"We've got REME specialists, POL wagons and all manner of spare parts and equipment on hand, so we can just about repair or replace anything. We mend them and send them on their way."

SECOND Lt Tim Dobson of A Squadron leads some of the men who would operate in advance of the front line. He has four Scimitars and 12 highly professional young soldiers under his command. They practise their role as often as possible.

Like all members of the regiment, Lt Dobson's men work hard at moulding themselves into a finely tuned fighting unit in which every man knows his job backwards and appreciates the meaning of teamwork.

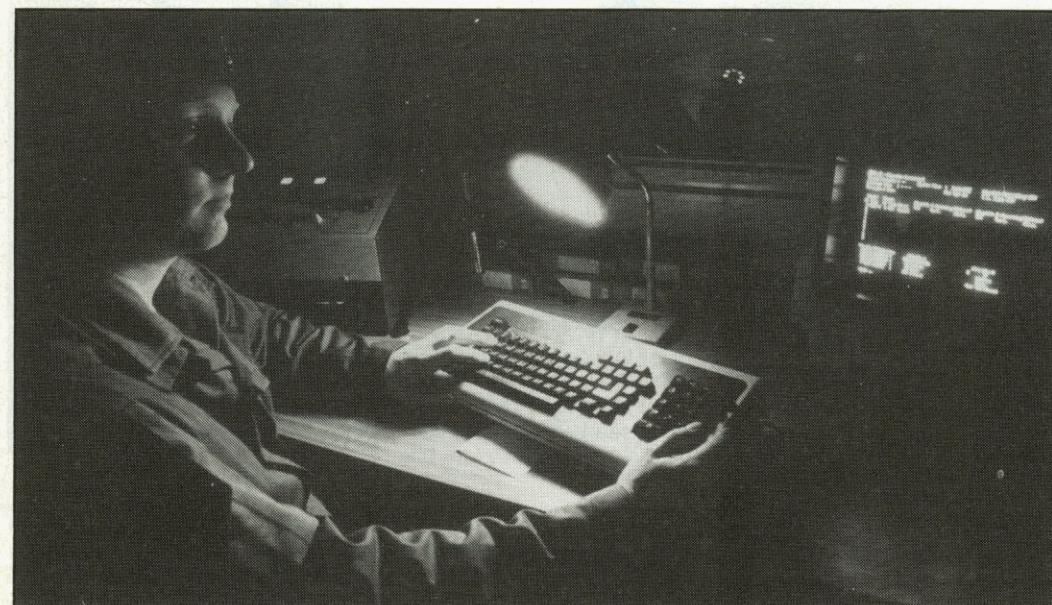

Everyone is required to learn a multiplicity of skills including escape and evasion techniques.

Lt Dobson has just returned from such a survival course and is eager to pass on this newly acquired knowledge to his men.

"It's vital because there could come a time when you get separated from your vehicle, have no weapon or equipment and have to survive in the wild evading capture by the enemy," he said.

It is demanding work for the crews because theirs is a very specialised job. But this high-morale regiment knows that, should their services ever be called upon, they will be able to carry out their duty as the eyes and ears of 1st British Corps.

NORTHAMPTON Barracks, home of the QDG, was originally built in 1936 for an air defence regiment of the Wehrmacht. It is known as a "Hitler" barracks. That is not as sinister as it seems for the term is generic - a camp built when the German leader was in power. Older ones are known as "Kaiser" barracks.

If your bank manager were suddenly conscripted, where would he put his pay?

Until recently, a soldier's main pay would be automatically credited to his bank account.

What wasn't spent simply sat there. Making money for the bank and nothing for you.

Now, there's a more interesting alternative. And it's Army approved. The National & Provincial Instant Access account.

From the moment your pay goes in, it starts earning. And, as your balance grows to £500, £5,000 and so on, you receive a higher rate of interest on the whole sum.

You can withdraw up to £1,000 cash or £20,000 cheque instantly, at any branch. (Even more with a few days' notice.)

Standing orders will take care of all your regular bills. Without hassle and without charges.

And, with a Money Manager card, you can withdraw up to £250 a day at over 900 cash machines, many of which are open round the clock.

Simply return the coupon for more information. Then, ask your bank manager what he'd do in your boots.

Around the world in 41 days!

EIGHT members of D Squadron, The Queen's Own Hussars from Hohne, West Germany have just been around the world in half the time it took Phineas Fogg.

Like him, they fitted in a lot of adventure (in the form of adventurous training) on their travels.

From Germany they flew to Hong Kong, stopping over briefly before journeying on south via Singapore to the Army Training Group at Waiouru, New Zealand.

They spent the next 20 days there as the guests of the Queen Alexandra's Squadron, at one time affiliated to the QOH.

The party of officers and soldiers aged from 18 to 27 was able to indulge in every adventurous training activity possible on the North and South Islands of New Zealand. These included white water rafting and canoeing, hill climbing, trekking, diving and even some sheep drafting.

On the return journey they flew with the Royal New Zealand Air Force to Melbourne for five days which included an opportunity for kangaroo spotting in the bush.

Next stop was Sydney, courtesy of the Royal Australian Air Force, before continuing across the Pacific Ocean to Honolulu where the Hussars stayed at an American Forces R and R centre and got in some sea canoeing.

Two days later they flew to San Francisco and then on to Washington DC, finally completing their 42,000 mile trip with the RAAF to Brize Norton and the RAF to Gutersloh.

White water rafting in the Devil's Cauldron on the Shotover River, New Zealand are members of D Sqn, QOH. They are Capt George Medlicott Goodwin, 2nd Lt Simon Rigby, LCpl Paul Greves, LCpl Gary Pollard, Tpr Adrian Fleetwood and Tpr Neil Coker

Why Hon Charles's men turned Green

REGIMENTS often took the name of their Colonel in the old days, but a slight difficulty arose when the Hon Charles Howard, second son of the Earl of Carlisle, took a colonelcy.

There was already a regiment under another Col Howard.

To distinguish between them they were called after the colour of the facings on their scarlet uniforms, one becoming the Buff Howards the other the Green.

The present official title is The Green Howards (Alexandra, Princess of Wales's Own Yorkshire Regiment).

Edward VII), Princess of Wales, interlaced with the Dannebrog, or Danish cross, surmounted by her coronet. Beneath it are the Roman numerals of the regiment and the honour scroll.

It seems that the Christian Danes were in a tight spot while fighting the heathen Estonians not long after Hastings, but the miraculous appearance of a white cross in the sky inspired one of the Princess's ancestors to save the day.

The cap badge was designed by the Princess and carries the date 1875, the year in which she presented Colours to replace those the 19th Foot had carried through the Crimean War. A sketch indicates that the ceremony took place at "The Farm, Sheffield".

The regiment had been associated with the North Riding of Yorkshire in 1782 and the Depot was established at Richmond, Yorks, in 1873.

The link with the Danish Royal House was renewed in 1942 when Queen Alexandra's son-in-law, King Haakon of Norway, who had previously been Prince Carl of Denmark, became Colonel in Chief. Today her grandson, King Olav, holds the appointment.

Though 85 this year the king has made arrangements to attend the 300th anniversary celebrations.

In our second report on the Green Howards in Londonderry writer Bill Moore and photographer Mike Weston look behind the scenes at the Families Office, some of the battalion treasures and, on Page 39, the important work of the medical team

Next stop Greenland for this brand new Fellow

EBRINGTON Barracks is full of surprises. When SOLDIER called at the Families Office the officer in charge was celebrating the fact that he had just been made a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society.

Capt David Johnson, who comes from York, transferred to the regiment more than three years ago from the RAMC.

He was busy organising an expedition to Greenland to climb a mountain called Richmond (RHQ is at Richmond, Yorks, which can be almost as cold!) as part of the tercentenary celebration.

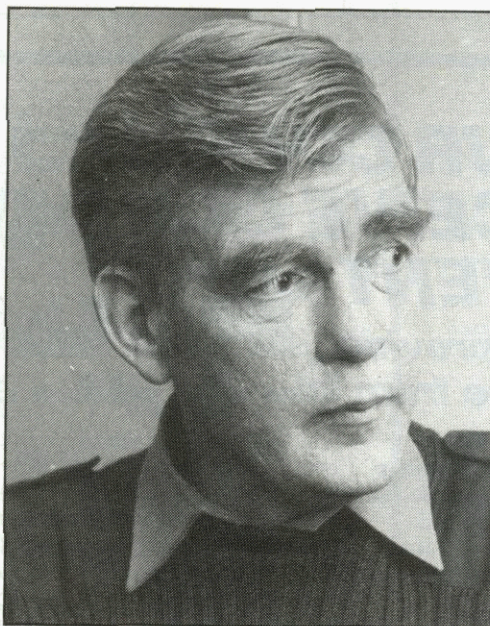

Two officers, a warrant officer, a colour sergeant and four junior ranks will set up a base camp beside a gravel airstrip where there is a tiny Danish settlement.

"It will be an exercise in self-reliance," he said. "There can be no immediate relief in case of trouble."

The exercise will include the collection of moss and lichen for scientific purposes.

Capt Johnson has been training prospective candidates in the Mourne mountains.

They should be in good hands. Among other achievements he has climbed the north face of the Eiger.

Col Sgt Alf Alty – Lancashireman in a Yorkshire regiment

Standing in for him while he is away will be Capt Crispin Scott who has two stalwart aides in Col Sgt Alf Alty and Mrs Julie Scott.

Col Sgt Alty joined the battalion "way back" and has been with it on every Ulster tour.

"When we were first here on the Lower Falls a section had three men with rifles and three with batons," he recalled. "We were only playing at it. It's a lot different now."

He reckoned that many wives on two-year tours in the Province liked them because they knew where they were and could plan for leave and off duty time.

Mrs Scott, 23 and a soldier's

Mrs Julie Scott. She likes the place better than Germany wife for six years, was quick to agree with Col Sgt Alty.

"I like it here better than Germany," she said. "Mind you I have a job and I think that makes a big difference."

Julie's dad runs a pub at Middlesbrough.

"It's nice to know you can get a flight home every four months," she said.

SNUFF OF THAT!

Above – Pte Harry Crichton, ten years a Green Howard and now mess silverman, polishes the silver statuette of the Princess of Wales (later Queen Alexandra) presented when the regiment received its Colours from her in 1875

Right – Col Sgt Jimmy Foster keeps a firm grip in more ways than one on the snuff box that Napoleon presented to Marshal Ney. One of three believed to have survived, its gold scroll surrounds a miniature of the Emperor by the great painter David. Col Sgt Foster, 24 years a Green Howard, keeps the box under lock and key and on mess nights follows its progress round the officers' mess table with hawk-like attention

ANY outfit that travels the world for 300 years is bound to pick up a few souvenirs.

Enter the mess of the 1st Battalion The Green Howards at Ebrington Barracks and you will find yourself staring at a savage looking bear in the eye – a pelt presented by the Rocky Mountain Rangers of Canada (an Allied regiment).

The skin is one of those items which junior officers find irresistible on a mess night and if that bear could talk...

Currently it is draped over a stand of drums captured from the Russians when the 19th Foot stormed a redoubt at the battle of the Alma during the Crimean War.

The drums are carried each year on the anniversary of the battle.

Locked away in Col Sgt Jimmy Foster's safe is another precious relic – a gold snuff box decorated with Napoleon's portrait. It is passed round on mess nights (though snuff takers are few and far between these days), and is usually referred to as "the Napoleon snuff box".

The question is – how did it come into the possession of a regiment which served in Ceylon and India between 1796 and 1820, thus never setting foot in Portugal, Spain or France?

Why Jimmy keeps his eye on old Boney

The explanation is that it belonged to Marshal Ney (it seems the Emperor gave one to all his marshals) and was "liberated" by a Guards officer who found the fiery Frenchman's coach abandoned after Waterloo.

The officer had a son who joined the 19th Foot and it was bought for the regiment when his effects were auctioned (according to the custom of the time) after his death in India.

Officially it is the property of the 2nd Green Howards which was not disbanded but went into "suspended animation" in 1956.

It used to be held at the Depot, Richmond, but since 1961 has been on loan to 1 Green Howards.

Putting a patch on the scars of Londonderry

QUITE a number of Green Howards will leave Londonderry with unwelcome mementoes of their tour.

In addition to the handful who have suffered injuries in bomb blasts many more have the scars inflicted by stones, bricks and assorted missiles.

When they look at them they will have no difficulty in recalling who stitched them up – in nearly every case a pale, determined RAMC woman doctor.

In 18 months Capt

Claudine Horrocks has put in more than 700 stitches. She is bent on seeing that any damage done is repaired as neatly as possible.

Capt Horrocks trained at Guys and later worked as a houseman at Woolwich and Blackburn.

It is her first appointment as a regimental medical officer and it began even before the battalion arrived. She got to Londonderry ahead of them and spent a short time with the Royal Anglian battalion they relieved.

The severe injuries that can be inflicted by a brick, especially if it catches a soldier with his visor raised, perhaps to shout a warning to a companion, are seldom seen by the public in general.

The size of the stones thrown has to be seen to be believed. In one case half a manhole cover was dropped from a bridge on to a soldier's head.

"Had it not been for his helmet it would have killed him," said Capt Horrocks. "As it is he was concussed and badly shaken."

The staff at the medical centre reflect the dedication of their boss.

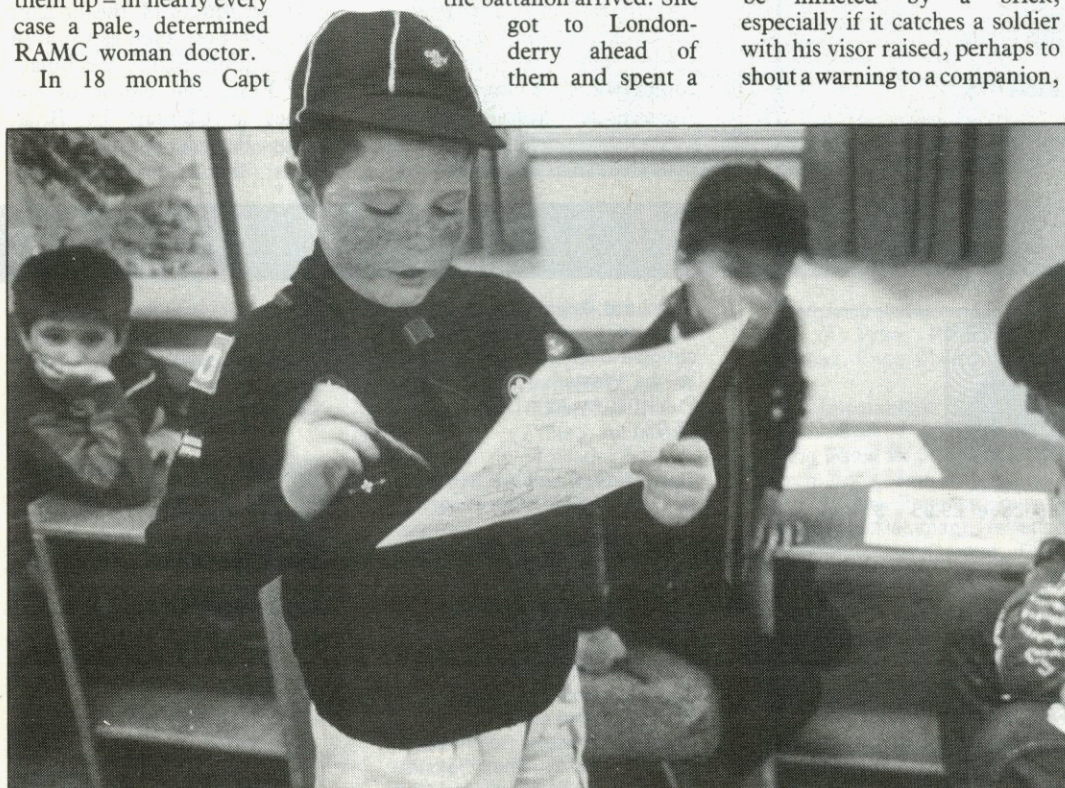

They set to willingly to demonstrate to SOLDIER just how they handled casualties and quickly produced a bloody victim in the shape of Pte Terry Tansley from Sheffield.

The type of vicious gash on his forehead is something they have to deal with too often in reality.

Capt Horrocks is going to be missed when she is posted to the British Military Hospital, Munster, later this year.

Though she is no relation of the celebrated Sir Brian she has a lot of that old warrior's knack of understanding the ordinary soldier.

★ COMBAT kit is not the only uniform to be seen at Ebrington Barracks. There is also a flourishing pack of Cubs looked after by Mrs Nicola Danie who started them up after her husband was posted to Northern Ireland from Hong Kong. He is a PSI with 211 Ambulance Squadron RCT.

The complete book of Irish soldiers

An Irish Ranger prepares to go on patrol in Cyprus during a tour of duty in the mid Seventies. The Irish soldier has played his part in military history all over the world

IRISH soldiery has a truly amazing history with its roots in the dim past of legend and mysterious names like Briothan-Maol and Nuada. To the latter's reign belong The Three Sorrowful Tales of Erin.

It was against the Norse invasions and occupations that really began the recorded history of warfare in Ireland, and it is this period to the era of King John in Ireland that forms the opening chapter in a remarkably detailed book, A History of the Irish Soldier.

In 566 pages Brig A E C Bredin presents a unique chronology of Irish involvement in war, not only in defence of the homeland but the considerable part played in the service of the British Crown, and as mercenaries in the armies of France and Spain.

He tells of the Irish commanders of the Imperial Austrian and Russian armies, and of the Irishmen who provided such a patent influence in both sides during the American Civil War.

Gen Sir John Hackett pays his compliment to the author in a foreword: "I was enthralled to learn so much more about my own regiment (which was also my grandsire's) than I ever knew before and I am sure every officer of an Irish regiment will have, when he reads this book, as he must, a similar experience."

It is not light entertainment, and the reader when he opens the book must be prepared to be informed. It is of such depth, detail and diversity as to be impossible to review adequately within the limitations of this space.

It can best be illustrated by using Brig Bredin's own words:

"One thinks of the ancient Irish Warriors such as Conn of the Hundred Fights, Cuchulain and Finn; the defeat of the Danes at Clontarf by Brian Boru; Patrick Sarsfield's exploits; and those of the O'Neills; the 18th Royal Irish Regiment at Namau; the Irish Brigade winning the battle for the French at Fontenoy; the Connaught Rangers on many occasions in the Peninsular War and the Royal Irish Fusiliers especially at Barrosa; the raising of the Irish Guards as a tribute to the gallantry of the Irish Regiments in the Boer War; the outstanding rearguard action of the Royal Munster Fusiliers at Etreaux, during the retreat from Mons; the valour of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers and the Royal Munster Fusiliers on V Beach at Gallipoli . . ."

The publishers believe the book to be the first attempted history of the Irish soldier. It is certainly one that would be extremely hard to follow. — BJ

Dietrich: Ordinary man or monster?

FOR well over 50 years SS General Sepp Dietrich maintained a notorious reputation for being a devotee of Nazism. Dietrich had a military career that began in 1911 with enlistment in the Bavarian army, interrupted when he fell heavily from a horse and resumed with the outbreak of war in 1914.

But it is as leader of Adolf Hitler's personal bodyguard in the early 1930s and the formation of the SS Leibstandarte, which he initiated, that first gave him a prominent place in military history.

His part in the infamous Night of the Long Knives of 1934, for which he stood trial as late as 1957, is a prime reason for his notoriety.

More than all other reasons, however, his reputation was gained because of accusations of numerous war crimes.

Dietrich has been described as an "ordinary man" — a surprising tag for one with associations with such horrendous acts.

Now, in a first biography, Hitler's Gladiator, Charles Messenger attempts to explain the paradox.

He explored archives in Germany, Britain and the USA, and interviewed survivors who knew the man. The result is an enlightening portrait of both Dietrich and his Germany.

As the war progressed he attracted a mounting reputation for atrocities but only one resulted in a postwar war crimes trial. This was the Malmedy massacre of December 1944, a detailed study of which can be found in Leo Kessler's SS Peiper (Leo Cooper/Secker & Warburg), a good companion for this latest biography of Dietrich. — BJ

KENT BOWLERS SNATCH VICTORY FROM JAWS OF DEFEAT

BOTH the Army senior and under 25 sides had their opening matches of the season, with the former playing Kent 2nd XI in what should have been a two day game at Chatham and the under 25s playing two games at Aldershot at the weekend.

After the first day against Kent had been rained off, a one day 55 over game was played.

4 Regt pips the sappers

THE 4 Armd Division swimming championships were held at the SudBad, Hameln, West Germany and sponsored by 28 Amp Engr Regt.

In the major units' competition 4 Regt AAC beat 28 Regt by one place in the last race with 35 Engr Regt third.

In The water polo 5 Innis DG went through undefeated with 35 Engrs again just missing the top honours.

Hermitage triathlon

MORE than 110 supremely fit sportsmen and women gathered at 42 Survey Engineer Group's Denison Barracks in Hermitage, Berks to take part in the third annual Survey spring triathlon. Competitors came from as far afield as Dusseldorf in Germany.

Winning team was RAF Halton, CIOR were second, RMAS Permanent Staff third and the TA soldiers of Royal Monmouthshire RE fourth. Overall winner was Lt Chris Maund of CIOR with Capt Mike Dunford RE, third.

The Army bowled and fielded extremely well to dismiss Kent for 121 in 52 overs. Lt Charlie Redmayne (1 IG) made the initial breakthrough and finished with three for 12 in nine overs.

Lts Tom Thicknesse and Julian Barrett (both Light Div Depot) each took two wickets as did 2nd Lt Edward Thesiger (RGJ/Nottingham University) who made a most promising debut.

The most economical figures, however, were achieved by skipper Lt Matthew Fleming (2 RGJ) who took one for 13 in his 11 overs.

Capt Jonathan Willatt (17 Trg Regt and Depot RA) and Lt Alistair Lamb (1 RWF) gave the Army a sound start. Fleming was top scorer with 37 and at 86 for four the Army appeared to be coasting home.

At this stage Fleming was out and the last six wickets fell disappointingly for 26 runs to give Kent victory by nine runs with seven overs and one ball still remaining.

The first under 25 match was against a strong Army President's XI containing two current and a number of former Army players. The Army under 25s batted first and were all out for 196. Lt Peter Germain (1 PWO) was top scorer with a well struck 55, Cpl Graham Summersgill (1 DWR) who opened made 40 and Fleming 32.

The bulk of the President's bowling was done by Cpl Andy Taylor (17 Port Regiment), five for 83 in 22 overs and Charles Rowe, formerly of Kent and Glamorgan, two for 65 in 26 overs.

When the President's XI batted Willatt settled in but wickets fell at regular intervals at the other end. With the score at 106 for six the odds were in favour of the under 25s. At this stage the President's skipper, Lt Col Peter Salisbury (CDE Porton), joined Willatt and no further wickets fell.

The final score was 172 for six with Willatt completing a well earned century in the last over.

Next day opposition was provided by the Southern League Under 25. The visitors batted first and were restricted to 184 for nine in their 55 overs. The fielding was good, with Summersgill outstanding, and four of the opposition were run out.

Fleming (40) and Germain (39) were again leading scorers when the Army batted and there were other useful contributions from batsmen down the order.

In a thrilling finish the Army were all out for 182 to lose by two runs with only four balls remaining.

Foiled again!

DESPITE fielding its strongest possible team in the hope of regaining the Inter-Services team fencing championship at Aldershot, the Army were beaten into second place by the Royal Air Force, with the Royal Navy some way behind in third.

The airmen pipped the Army 5-4 in a very close foil competition before the soldiers took their expected revenge in the epee match where internationals Lt Dominic Mahony, Cpl Peter Hart and COH Ian Margan were responsible for a 6-3 victory.

After the foil and epee the Army and RAF were level on two points each. In the sabre match the RAF beat the Navy 8-1 and the Army 6-3 to retain their Inter-Services title.

The Navy finished pointless and have not got the strength in depth to be serious contenders.

But they did fight extremely hard throughout the day and had their best result in the sabre, running the Army close before losing 4-5.

The RAF achieved 38 individual victories to 33 by the Army and ten by the Navy.

In the women's competition the WRAF continued to dominate with a convincing 12-4 victory over the WRAC and a hard-fought 10-6 win against the WRNS.

Despite the absence of two regular members of the team, the WRAC put up a spirited performance before trailing home in third place with eight victories to 22 by the champions, the WRAF, and 18 by the WRNS.

LANCE Sgt Tom Wilson, 1st Battalion Scots Guards, has smashed a 26-year-old record at the British Army Golf Club at Hohne, West Germany. Tom, a seven handicap golfer, was playing in the Pearson Trophy and went round the Hohne course in 69 shots. His round included six birdies and a seven!

What makes this round remarkable is that in the 26 years that the golf course has been open, no one has ever broken 70 in a competition round. This includes visiting professionals.

His only previous victory of note was the UKLF scratch championship at Little Aston in 1984.

Barrett leads way against young pros

THE ARMY achieved a superb win over MCC Young Professionals on the Nursery Ground at Lords. MCC, who included West Indian test off spinner Roger Harper, batted first on an excellent batting wicket, writes Peter Salisbury.

Opener Julian Wood carried his bat for 130 out of 282 for three declared with Neil Maxwell (101) also completing a century. Army skipper, Lt Matthew Fleming (2 RGJ), took all three wickets for 61 in 15 overs, including that of Harper who was out for nought.

The Army's assault on this large total was led by Lt Julian Barrett (Light Div Depot) who scored the third century of the match with 119. Capt Jonathon Willatt (17 Trg Regt and Depot RA) put on 53 with Barrett for the second wicket. When he was run out Lt Tom Thicknesse (Light Div Depot) was sent in as "tea watchman", and his third wicket stand with Barrett realised 115.

Fleming (29) and Cpl Graham Summersgill (1 DWR) (11) made brisk contributions before Capt Edward Gordon-Lennox (2 Gren Gds) and Lt Peter Germain (1 PWO) led the final assault, 37 runs being needed off the last seven overs.

They were made in style with Gordon-Lennox finishing with five sixes, four of them off Harper, in his 37 not out.

Following this excellent victory the Army were soundly defeated by a strong Middlesex 2nd XI four days later at Aldershot. The Army started well enough, Capt Paul Presland (AAC Centre) dismiss-sing both Middlesex openers without scoring in a match reduced to 46 overs by rain. In the last eight overs, thanks largely to a magnificent undefeated half century by Clive Radley, Middlesex added a further 67 runs.

Willatt and Lt Alistair Lamb (JIB Shorncliffe), who went on to make top score with 23, gave the Army a sound if rather slow start. They put on 36 in 20 overs, leaving 26 overs after tea to get 152, a tall order particularly as the Middlesex spinners Philip Tufnell (3-17) and Alex Barnett (6-11) bowled superbly and the Army succumbed by 94 runs.

PWO are top shots

CATTERICK Garrison's top guns, the shooting team of 1 Bn The Prince of Wales's Own Regiment of Yorkshire, weighed down by silver and pewter after winning top prize - the major units' championship at the North East District Skill at Arms Meeting - on Catterick's ranges. It was the first time the regiment had been able to compete in a NEDSAM as they have never served in their native shire before. They also used the new 5.56mm SA 80 rifle, the first time it has been seen at the annual meeting. The match wins which took them to the title were rifle, machine gun, moving target and falling plates. They were also runners up in the section match. Back row (left to right) are Ptes Steve Bingley, Richard Sawtell, Capt Ron Bradley, LCpl Barry Wilson, Pte Andrew Lavelle; and, Front row - Cpl Michael Shelton, Sgt Neil Clark, Col Sgt Brian Kelly, and LCpl Martin Armstrong.

There's no rest for Britain's soldier skiers

MOST of us probably imagine that, once the snow has gone, military skiers return to the daily routine of regimental life. Not so for the soldiers in Great Britain's biathlon team.

Their training continues unabated throughout the summer months, and includes roller skiing, running, cycling, swimming, shooting and weight training.

Members of the team have just spent a week at the Army School of Physical Training in Aldershot. They underwent physiological testing at the Army Personnel Research Establishment and listened to lectures from doctors, physiotherapist, nutrition experts and public relations specialists.

They were also interviewed by a sports psychologist and now begin a lengthy programme of mental training aimed at achieving medal winning results in the 1992 Winter Olympics.

Signals' cup hopes dashed

ARMY soccer champions the School of Signals, Blandford, Dorset, saw the Naafi Jubilee Cup slip from their grasp in a thrilling final match of the competition sponsored by Webster's Yorkshire Bitter.

The Army side, who beat RAF soccer champions RAF Locking 1-0 and top Royal Navy side HMS Sultan 2-0 could only watch from the spectator stand as Sultan beat Locking 4-0 to take the tri-Service trophy, decided on goals scored.

Locking floundered under relentless pressure from the kick-off as Sultan pushed forward to get the four goals which could give them victory. The first came after 13 minutes when veteran POPT Lee Tongue won a goalmouth scramble. Three minutes later a shot from LMEM Shelly Sheldon found the back of the net. A third came after a scramble in the six-yard box won by Lt Neil Bennett.

Play was more even in the second half, but, 12 minutes from time LMEM Sheldon lobbed the ball over a stranded defence to give Sultan their fourth goal and victory in the Naafi Jubilee Cup competition.

That left the Army champions to pick-up commemorative engraved glass tankards from Chris Nicholl, manager of Southampton Football Club and former Northern Ireland international.

School of Signals captain, Sgt Sandy Brown said he was disappointed to have beaten both Sultan and Locking and still lost the Naafi Jubilee Cup.

"If only Locking had been able to get into the final, things might have been different. As it was Sultan played well."

Pte Paul Evans takes on Pontypool star Mark Brown (hoops) during the visit of the Welsh champions to 1 Bn The Royal Regiment of Wales at Lemgo, West Germany. Pontypool, who included legendary prop Graham Price and international scrum half David Bishop, won by 66 points to 30. In support are Pte Neil Dudsun and Sgt Kevin Ahearne who scored four tries for 1 RRW

THE NEW PEUGEOT 405. TAKES YOUR BREATH AWAY.

Hardly surprising, when you check out that sleek body style. No car in its class has a lower drag factor.

The combination of wrap-over doors, flush-fit bonded windscreen and rear window all conspire to reduce wind-noise and improve aerodynamics. (Thus affording excellent fuel economy.)

Look closer and you'll find that we've mounted the windscreen washer jets on the wiper arms. Incorporated a tilt adjustable steering column. Remote control rear-view mirrors. Height adjustable front seat belts. And a lights-on warning buzzer.

But of course, to fully appreciate the 405, you really must get behind the wheel and drive it. For when it comes to handling and performance, we've virtually cornered the market.

The all aluminium alloy, ohc engine, allied to a five speed box and the much praised Peugeot suspension proves to be a potent combination.

While off the road the 405 is designed to spend an absolute minimum of time in the service bay.

There are 8 models to choose from, with various levels of specification, culminating in the top of the range, 124mph GTX Injection.

Heralding a new era in car production, the 405 has just been voted "European Car of the Year," by a jury of respected journalists.

Obviously it took their breath away.

How is this for a superbly timed photograph? It was taken by Sgt. Ian Stagg who was photographing colleagues from Mortar Line A of 3 (Essex) Coy, 5 Bn The Royal Anglian Regiment during a rare exposure to live ammunition at Sennybridge. The TA unit is based at Chelmsford, Essex. The picture shows the platoon firing an 81mm mortar during a locating exercise.
